Pop. 42,997 (of whom 11,931 for., and 159 colored).

—a city, cap. of the above co., occupying 13 sq. m. of plateau and bluff on the W. bank of the Mississippi R., 470 m. N. of St. Louis, 321 m. S. of St. Paul, and 199 m. W. of Chicago. It is the point of junction of the I. C., D. & S. C. and C., D. & M. R.R.s., and during the season of navigation has two lines of steamers plying to St. Louis and St. Paul. It is distinguished for the excellence of its educational institutions. It is the seat of the Iowa Institute of Science and Arts, a widely known and very useful institution. Dubuque is opposite the point where the line between Wisconsin and Illinois reaches the Mississippi, and is one of the richest lead regions known. It is the seat of a Roman Catholic and a Protestant Episcopal bishop. It contains a large cathedral, a city hall, a custom-house, 3 nat. and 2 other banks, a German Presbyterian theological school, and an Episcopal seminary. It has large and increasing manuf. of shot, steam-engines, farming-implements, machinery, brick, white lead, leather, wooden ware, &c. 3 daily, 7 wkly, 1 bi-wkly and 1 monthly papers are published here. Dubuque was made a port of delivery in 1854. In 1880 there were 122 vessels with an aggregate tonnage of 13,843, belonging to the port, of which 45 of 4,397 tons were steamers, and 77 of 9,446 tons barges. It is connected with Dundeith, (Ill.) by a noble railway iron bridge, which is a "marvel of lightness and strength," and cost several millions of dollars. This bridge belongs to the I.C.R.R. Dubuque was first permanently settled in 1833. It is the entrepôt of a very extensive trade both by rail and river. Pop. in 1860, 13,000; in 1870, 18,434; in 1880, 22,254.

It is the E. terminus of the N.P.R.R., and the N. terminus of the L.S.&M.R.R., running from St. Paul. It has 12 churches, 2 grain elevators, a custom-house, a weather signal office, 2 banks, 1 daily and 2 wkly papers. The N.P. R.R. has in construction some of the largest private docks in the U.S. The harbor, entered by a ship canal 250 ft. wide, is landlocked, being formed by Minnesota and Rice's Points; the former is a scythe-shaped natural breakwater running out 7 m. into the lake. The harbor has been improved by the construction of several docks and piers, independent of the railroad company's works. The outer harbor is protected by a breakwater. Duluth has a large stove factory, machine and car building works, &c. In May, 1869, the site of the city was a forest—the old Duluth, at that time situated on Minnesota Point, consisted of a few cabins. The place is named after Capt. John Duluth, a French traveler, who visited the country and built a hut in 1760. Large quantities of wheat and flour are shipped from here, principally to Buffalo, N.Y. Pop. 3,483.

Durango, Col., a city ♦, La Plata co., 172 m. S. W. Denver by the San Juan div. of the D. & R. G. RR., in a smiling valley of abt. 2 m. in width, rising in gentle steps, or mesas, on either sides, back to superb bluffs, the loftiest towering to a height of from 1,500 to 2,000 ft. It has every advantage to render it the great commercial and smelting centre of a large area of country, embracing the entire San Juan mining region, S. E. Utah, N. E. Arizona, and N. W. New Mexico. New mines are being discovered constantly, some within 2 or 3 m. of the city, and but a very small portion of the entire S. slope of the Sierra Madre, among the foot hills of which Durango may be said to be located, has even been prospected. The water-power of the Animas R. and other streams in this vicinity, is unsurpassed in the State. The agricultural resources of all the valleys running S. and S. W. from this range are unstinted, and the mesas and foot hills afford the finest possible grazing. This wonderful city, first settled in 1881, had in 1882 abt. 200 business houses, 1 bank, 1 daily and 4 wkly papers, 2 theatres, 6 hotels, 2 school buildings, and several churches completed and in process of construction. Estimated pop. in 1882, 5,000.

situated on Moose Island, in Passamaquoddy Bay, on the boundary line between the U. States and New Brunswick, abt. 90 m. E. of Bangor. The village is compactly built on the S.E. shore of Moose Island, and communicates with the mainland by a covered bridge 1,200 ft. long to Perry, and by ferries to Lubec and other places. It is the port of entry of Passamaquoddy district, and has a spacious harbor, in which the tides rise more than 25 ft., and which is never blocked up by ice. In the season of navigation regular lines of steamers run up the river St. Croix to St. Andrew's and Calais, and also to Boston, Portland, and St. John N.B. The harbor is defended by Fort Sullivan, which stands on a hill in the midst of the village. The trade with the neighboring provinces of the Dominion is large, and lumber is exported in considerable quantities. Eastport is also the seat of a considerable fishing business. Large quantities of herring are taken in weirs abt. the shores of the bay. The value of imports from foreign countries in 1880 were $722,391; of exports, $904,229. The town contains a nat. bank, a savings institution, a fire insurance company, a wkly paper, 6 school-houses, 7 churches, and a fine custom-house building. It was incorporated in 1798, and was captured by the English, July 11, 1814. Pop. 425; of tp. 4,006.

East River, N. Y., a strait connecting New York Bay with Long Island Sound, about 18 m. long, and between New York and Brooklyn about $\frac{1}{2}$ m. wide. It leaves the sound at a point called Throg's Neck, where there is a light-house with a fixed light, and where Fort Schuyler defends the N.E. approach to New York; and it enters the bay S.E. of Manhattan Island, between the metropolis and Brooklyn. It also communicates with the Hudson by a narrow channel called Harlem R. and Spuyten Duyvel Creek, which separate Manhattan Island from the mainland. It has a rapid current caused by the tide from the Atlantic, which, gathering force as it flows W. into the narrowest part of the sound, reaches its greatest height in the East R., arrives at New York three-quarters of an hour earlier than that which rises in the bay, and drives upward along the E. shore of the Hudson many miles in advance of the tide on the W. shore. The East R. is navigable by vessels of the largest size, and is crossed by numerous steam-ferris, and also by a noble suspension bridge between the cities of New York and Brooklyn, which is still (1882) in process of construction. The central span across the river is 1,595 ft. long, and the whole length of the bridge will be 6,000 ft. East R. contains several islands, and has a pass called Hellgate, 7 m. from New York Bay, where a ledge of rocks, projecting for some distance from the Long Island shore under the channel, and rising at certain points almost to the surface of the water, formed at times such a seething and eddying current as to send terror to the hardiest of its navigators. The U. States Government in 1870 decided to free the channel of these obstructions, and engineers under the direction of Gen. Newton were engaged for 6 years drilling the principal rocks and charging them with nitro-glycerine, and in the summer of 1876 the whole mass was exploded. Excavations for another explosion are in progress, while dredges are busy removing the débris of the first explosion. The channel, however, is now sufficiently clear to be safely navigated at all times.

—a city and port of entry, cap. of Erie co., and the most important manuf. and commercial city of N.W. Pa., beautifully situated on Lake Erie, nearly midway between Buffalo and Cleveland, 117 m. N. of Pittsburgh. This city is a very extensive iron manuf. center, and as a residence place, has no superior on the lakes. It stands upon an elevated bluff commanding a fine view of the lakes. The streets are broad, and the residence portion of Erie is very handsome. State street is the principal business thoroughfare. The city contains several parks. Among the public buildings are the post-office, the custom-house, and the opera-house. The L.S. & M.S., the Philadelphia and Erie div. of the Penn., and E. & P. RRs., afford communication with Buffalo, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and the West. The harbor, which has been artificially improved, is 3½ m. long, over 1 m. wide, and from 9 to 25 ft. deep, and is protected by Presque Isle, formerly a peninsula, lying in front of the city. At the entrance are 2 light-houses, and there are several large docks. In 1880 there were entered and cleared in the coastwise trade 2,024 vessels of 1,565,183 tons; the value of imports from, and exports to Canada were small; the enrolled tonnage of the port was 28,247. The principal articles of shipment are lumber, coal, iron ore, and petroleum. The leading manuf. are of iron, embracing stoves, steam-engines, machinery, car wheels, and car works, besides which there are various other manuf. Erie has 4 nat. banks, and 5 other and savings banks; 3 daily and 11 wkly papers, and 4 insurance companies, an academy, marine hospital, 29 churches, and abt. 50 public schools. It is divided into 6 wards, and is governed by a mayor, and a select council of 2 members, and a common council of 3 members for each ward. It is lighted with gas, and is supplied from the lake with water, which is forced by powerful engines to the top of a tower 200 ft. high, whence it is distributed through the mains. Erie was laid out in 1795, and received its city character in 1851. Pop. in 1860, 9,419; in 1870, 19,646; in 1880, 27,730.

Erie, Tenn. (also called EMORY and BLUE SPRINGS), p.v., Loudon co., 17 m. S.W. Loudon. Pop. 35.

Erie Canal, the most important, as well as the largest, canal in the U.S., extends from Buffalo to Albany, N.Y., and is 363 m. long. It was completed in 1825 at a cost of $7,602,000. Its original width was 40 feet at the surface, with a depth of 4 feet; but the canal has been subsequently so enlarged that the surface-width is 70 feet, the bottom-width 42 feet, and the depth 7 feet. The commercial importance of this canal is very great. It is chiefly employed for transporting grain and such other bulky articles as do not require quick transit.

Erie Lake, one of the five great lakes drained by the St. Lawrence, lies between 41° 22' and 42° 52' N. lat., and between 78° 23' W. lon. It has the States of Ohio, Pennsylvania and New York on the S. and S.E. border, and the fertile peninsula of Ontario, Canada, on the N. It has an elliptical shape, and is about 265 m. long, and varies in its breadth from 10 to 63 m. It receives at its W. end, through Detroit R. or strait, the discharge of water from the great upper lakes, and discharges its own waters through Niagara R. Its surface is elevated 565 feet above tide-water at Albany, 52 feet below lake Michigan and Huron, and 322 ft. above the level of Lake Ontario. Its waters are more shallow than those of the great lakes. The greatest depth which has been obtained by sounding, is 270 ft. Its mean depth is not over 120 ft. It receives from Canada but a few small streams, the principal of which is the Ouse or Welland, near its E. extremity. From Michigan it receives the Huron and Raisin; from Ohio, the Maumee, Portage, Sandusky, Vermillion, Black, Cuyahoga, Grand, Ash-tabula and Conneaut; and from Pennsylvania, Elk, and other small creeks; and from N. York, the Cat-tarangus and Buffalo creeks. The rivers of lake Erie have bars at their mouths, rarely affording more than eight ft. water. A little N.W. of the mouth of Sandusky bay, is a group of islands called North, Middle and South Bass islands. In the N. part of the S. island, is Put-in bay, which has twelve ft. of water, and affords the best harbor on the lake, and is easily accessible. Into this harbor Commodore Perry brought his prizes, after the battle of Lake Erie. The battle was fought a little to the N.W. of this, Sept. 10, 1813. The best harbors on the S. shore, are Sandusky in O., Erie in Pa., and Buffalo and Black Rock, in N.Y. Port Maitland, at the mouth of the Grand or Ouse R. forms the best, and almost the only harbor on the Canada shore. In consequence of its shallowness, a part of the lake is frozen over every winter, and navigation is for several months suspended. Owing also to its shallowness, it is readily disturbed by wind; and for this reason, and for its paucity of good harbors, it has the reputation of being the most dangerous to navigate of any of the great lakes. In the season of navigation an immense amount of transportation is done upon it, and its commerce is of great value. The communication with Lake Ontario is through the Welland canal, constructed across the Canadian peninsula. The fisheries of this lake are of little importance compared with those of the upper lakes, where the same kinds of fish are more abundant and of better quality.

Fall River, Mass., a city and port of entry, Bristol co., in lat. 41° 42' 3" N., lon. 71° 9' 37½" W., on the Rhode Island border, on the E. side of Mt. Hope Bay, the N.E. arm of Narragansett Bay, and along Taunton R., some 20 m. from the sea. It is 48½

m. S. of Boston, 20 from Providence, R. I., 13 from New Bedford, Mass., and 18 from Newport, R.I., being connected with each by railway. It is at the head of deep-water navigation, and the terminus of a line of steamers from New York. The harbor is safe, commodious, easy of access and deep enough for the largest vessel. To this port belonged in 1881, 86 sailing vessels of 11,696 tons, 201 steamers of 14,554 tons, and 7 barges of 2,218 tons. Its industries comprise iron-works that run 105 nail-machines and turn out 120,000 kegs of nails yearly; 2 large calico print-works 1 woollen-factory; 38 cotton-mills, turning out some 300,000,000 yards per annum, mostly print cloths; a large bleachery, and a multitude of mechanical enterprises connected with the cotton manuf. The capital employed in these industries is over $20,000,000, keeping in motion 1,269,788 spindles and 29,521 looms. It has 7 nat., 2 private and 4 savings banks; 2 daily and 7 wkly papers; immense granite-quarries; a large coastwise shipping-trade; a children's home; a free public library and reading-room; a high school, 23 churches; and 2 handsome parks. Fall River derives its name from a small stream of that name, which empties into the Taunton near its mouth; was first settled in 1659, and became a city in 1854. Pop. (1870) 26,766; (1880) 49,006.

Flathead Indians, a misnamed tribe of the Shosh family, as unlike other tribes of the N.W. coast, they do not flatten the heads of their infants. They have all become Roman Catholics, have adopted the dress and habits of white men, and are uniformly peaceful toward the whites. In 1871 they were removed by the U.S. government from their old abode on the Bitter Root R. to the Joko Valley, Mont. Their language is very hard to learn. The number of Flatheads on the reservation is abt. 450, but it is understood that many of the tribes are not on the reservation.

Flathead Lake, Mont., lies in Missoula co., W. of the Rocky Mts. Its length abt. 30 m., average breadth 13 m. Gold is found in its vicinity. Its waters flow through Flathead R., S.W. into Bitter Root R.

Florida, the most S. State of the Union, approaches within one degree of the torrid zone. It lies between lat. 24° 30' and 31° N., lon. 80° and 87° 45' W., and is bounded N. by Ga. and Ala.—from which last it is separated on the N.W. by the Perdido R. The Atlantic washes its E., and the Gulf of Mexico its S. and W. coasts, forming a sea-board of more than 1,000 m. Its entire length from Perdido R. to Cape Sable is abt. 700 m., its mean breadth 90 m.; area, 54,240 sq. m. The peninsula proper terminates on the S. of Cape Sable; but a remarkable chain of rocky islets, called the Florida Keys, begins at Cape Florida on the E. shore, extends S.W. nearly 200 m. in a direction generally conforming with that of the coast, and ends in a cluster of sand-heaped rocks known as the Tortugas. South of the bank on which these Keys rise, and separated from them by a navigable channel, is the long, narrow and dangerous coral ridge known as the Florida Reef. The most important of the keys is Key West. The Gulf coast of the State is intersected by numerous bays, among which are Pensacola, Choctawhatchee, St. Andrews, Appalachicola, Appalachee, Tampa, Charlotte, Ponce de Leon or Chatham, and Florida Bays, the last lying between the Keys and mainland. The chief rivers are the St. John's and the Indian R., which empty into the Atlantic; and the Suwanee, Ockloconee, Appalachicola, Choctawhatchee, Escambia, and Perdido, which flow into the Gulf of Mexico. The St. Mary's makes for some distance the northern boundary of the State. Florida has also numerous lakes, some of which are navigable. Lake Okeechobee, in the Everglades, is abt. 40 m. long and 30 broad. The surface is generally level, the greatest elevation being not more than 300 feet above the sea. The most remarkable feature is the immense tract of marsh filled with islands in the S. part of the State, called the Everglades, and by the Indians "grass-water." The soil is generally sandy, except in the hummocks, where it is intermixed with clay. Florida, except in the vicinity of the swamps, possesses one of the most equable and agreeable climates of the continent. Occupying as it does a situation between the temperate and tropical regions, it enjoys exemption from the frosts and sudden changes of the one and the excessive heat of the other. The mercury, however, sometimes falls to the freezing point, and great damage is done to the orange plantations. Statistics show the State to be one of the healthiest, if not the healthiest, in the U. States, and its resident population is largely increased in the winter months by invalids from the North, seeking a more genial clime.—The productions of Florida are of an essentially tropical character; cotton, tobacco, rice, sugar-cane, arrow-root, hemp, flax, coffee, and the cocoa-nut flourish there. The climate is also favorable to the cultivation of the silk-worm and for the cochineal insect. Oranges, bananas, lemons, limes, olives, grapes, pine-apples, grow abundantly, and are of exquisite flavor. The cultivation and export of oranges and other fruits have grown to be a considerable source of wealth to the State; and the manufacture of cigars, especially at Key West, is becoming an important industry. The pasturage afforded by the savannas is excellent, cattle requiring little or no attention from their owners, and no housing in winter. Game and fish abound in every part of the State. Deer, wild turkeys, partridges, geese, ducks, and other small game are in all the forests and about all the lakes, rivers, and swamps; green turtle, oysters, sheep's-head, red-fish, mullet, etc., are found on all the coasts, and fresh-water fish in all the inland waters. The State also produces the panther, wild-cat, raccoon, opossum, flying-squirrel, armadillo, alligator, and many kinds of serpents. Magnificent sponges are gathered along the reefs, and form a considerable item of trade. Cotton, rice, sugar, tobacco, lumber, fish, and fruits may be considered the most valuable products. According to the census of 1880, there were in Florida 863,515 acres of tilled land; the total value of farms was $22,128,013; of farm products, $8,129,801. The principal products for the census year were 1,450,699 lbs. of rice, 3,040,657 lbs. of corn, 306,766 of oats, 1,752,909 of potatoes, 922,325 galls. of molasses, 210,357 lbs. of honey, 57,202 bales of cotton, 23,085 lbs. of tobacco, 89,028 bbis. of peaches, and abt. 80,000,000 oranges. The value of live stock on farms was $5,088,744, including 22,636 horses, 9,066 mules and asses, 16,141 working oxen, 42,174 milch cows, 409,055 other cattle, 56,681 sheep (yielding 200,000 lbs. of wool), and 287,051 swine. Florida cotton is grown almost exclusively in the northern group of counties, but the State is capable of producing the celebrated Sea Island variety, the cultivation of which was formerly confined to a few islands on the coasts of S. C. and Ga. Appalachicola, formerly a considerable shipping port for cotton, has been superseded by Fernandina on the Atlantic. The wool grown in Florida is long-shaped, of medium and coarse grades, little attention being as yet given to producing fine wools. The forests form no inconsiderable source of wealth. The live-oak, so valuable in ship-building, abounds, also the other varieties of oak, swamp cypress, hickory, pine, magnolia, dogwood, and laurel. The palmetto (Castor-oil-bear) becomes here a large tree; on the islands and keys, boxwood, satinwood, mastic, and lignum-vitæ grow abundantly. The pine is found from Cape Sable to near Indian R.—Manufactures are unimportant, and are chiefly confined to flour and grist mills, and establishments for the manufacture of sugar and molasses. In 1880 there were 426 manuf. establishments, employing 5,404, capital invested $3,210,680, wages paid during the year, $1,270,875, value of materials, $3,040,119, of products, $5,546,448. Agriculture and commerce are the chief resources of the State,—the export of its fibrous products, cereals, fruits, fish, live-oak, and other timber, giving employment to a considerable tonnage. Among the mineral productions may be named amethyst, turquoise, lapis-lazuli, ochre, coal, and iron ore.—Notwithstanding the great extent of its sea-coast, Florida has few good harbors. Besides being a naval station, Key West is a place of considerable importance. Pensacola, Apalachicola, St. Marks, Cedar Keys, Tampa, and Charlotte on the Gulf, and Fernandina and St. Augustine on the Atlantic coast, are the principal ports. Of these the harbors of Pensacola and Fernandina are the best. The coasting trade employs many steamers and sailing craft, plying chiefly between Florida ports and Savannah, Baltimore, Philadelphia, and New York. The bulk of foreign merchandise reaches the State from northern ports instead of by direct importation. Key West shows much the largest tonnage of vessels entering or clearing, St. John's and Fernandina following in the order named. Ship-building is carried on at all the ports, the vessels usually being of small burthen, for coast traffic.—In 1882, there were 793 m. of railroad in operation in Florida.—The public school system of the State is increasing in scope and efficiency. The latest official report shows 992 public common schools, with 36,964 scholars in attendance.—Florida is divided into 39 counties, viz.: Alachua, Baker, Bradford, Brevard, Calhoun, Clay, Columbia, Dade, Duval, Escambia, Franklin, Gadsden, Hamilton, Hernando, Hillsborough, Holmes, Jackson, Jefferson, Lafayette, Leon, Levy, Liberty, Madison, Manatee, Marion, Monroe, Nassau, Orange, Polk, Putnam, St. John's, Santa Rosa, Sumter, Suwanee, Taylor, Volusia, Wakulla, Walton, Washington. The cities are Jacksonville, Pensacola, St. Augustine, and Tallahassee (the cap.).—The executive power is vested in a governor elected by the people every 4 years. The legislative power is represented by a senate elected for 4 years, and a house of representatives or assembly chosen for 2 years. The judiciary consists of a supreme court, having one chief and two associate judges, who hold three annual sessions in Tallahassee; there are also 7 circuit besides other inferior courts. The State sends 2 representatives to the federal Congress, and has 4 electoral votes. In 1882 the State debt was $1,285,260; and the valuation of taxable property $36,691,823.—Florida was the first part of the U. States occupied by Europeans. Sebastian Cabot discovered the coast in 1497. De Leon and Ferdinand de Soto visited it in 1521 and 1539. It was ceded by Spain to the U. States in 1821 for $5,000,000. The Seminole war broke out in 1835, lasted 7 years and cost 1,466 lives and $10 to $15,000,000. The State was admitted to the Union March 3, 1845. It passed an ordinance of secession Jan. 10, 1861, which was repealed Oct. 28, 1865. A new constitution was ratified in May, 1868.—Pop. in 1830, 34,730; in 1860, 140,424; in 1870, 187,748; in 1880, 269,493 (of whom 259,584 natives and 9,909 of foreign birth, 142,605 whites, and 126,690 colored, 18 Chinese, and 154 Indians).

Fox River. There are 3 rivers of this name.—I. Rises in Davis co., Iowa, flows S.E. abt. 100 m. and enters the Mississippi R. near Alexandria, Clarke co., Mo.—II. Also called by the Indians, Neenah, rises in the S. central part of Wis., and flows first nearly S.W. to within 1½ m. of the Wisconsin, when it turns suddenly N., and after a course of a few miles assumes a N.E. direction, passing through Lake Winnebago, and into the S. end of Green Bay. The rapids in its lower course furnish immense water-power. The channel has been improved so that steamboats pass from Green Bay to Lake Winnebago. The subject of connecting the Fox and Wisconsin Rrs. by a ship canal, so as to admit vessels from Lake Michigan into the Mississippi R., has been much discussed, and a government survey of the route has been made. The whole length of Fox R. is abt. 200 m.—III. Also called the Pishtaka, a river which rises in Waukesha co., Wis., flows nearly due S. until it reaches Oswego, Ill., when it turns S.W., and falls into the Illinois R. at Ottawa, after a course of 300 m. It affords abundant water-power.

The main portion of the co., occupies the W. shore of Galveston Bay, and is separated from the island, lying in the gulf of Mexico, by West Bay. N.E. of the island and separated from it by a channel 1 or 2 m. wide, is Bolivar peninsula, forming a part of the co., and lying between the gulf and East Bay, an arm of Galveston Bay. The surface is generally level, and the soil sandy. The chief prod. in 1880 were 16,367 bush. of corn, and 21,806 of sweet potatoes. Cap., Galveston. Val. of taxable prop. abt. $20,000,000. Pop. 24,126 (of whom 5,403 for., and 5,656 colored).

—a city♦ and principal seaport of the State, cap. of above co., at the mouth of Galveston Bay, the entrance to which is through the channel between the city and the S.W. point of the peninsula of Bolivar, where a light-house has been erected, 180 m. E.S.E. Austin, and 200 m. W. by S. from New Orleans. It is connected by railroads with all parts of the State to which railroads extend, and by regular lines of steamships with Liverpool, New York, New Orleans, and the ports of W. Texas as far as the Mexican boundary, and sail vessels engage largely in direct trade with Great Britain and the continent of Europe, in the coffee-trade with Rio Janeiro, in the West India and Mexican trade, also in that with Northern U.S. ports. The G., H. & N. R.R. connects the city with Houston and the diverging railroads, crossing West Bay on a bridge nearly 2 m. long. The depot and warehouses cover 20 acres. The G. W. R.R. enables the company to load its cars directly from the vessels. A canal 10 m. long, opens an avenue for commerce to the Brazos R. The city is laid out with wide and straight streets, bordered by numerous flower gardens. The public buildings include the custom-house, post office, U.S. Court-House, county Court-House, city, and county prison, city hall, opera-house, 2 theatres, 3 concert halls, 4 other public halls, 13 hotels, and 3 market houses. Oleander park occupies 80 acres, and the city park 25 acres. There are 9 m. of street railroad in operation. The island is about 28 m. long and from $\frac{1}{2}$ to $\frac{3}{4}$ m. wide, intersected by many small bayous, diversified by several fresh-water ponds, and bordered through its whole length by a smooth hard beach, which forms a pleasant drive and promenade. The bay is an irregular indentation, branching out into various arms, and receiving Trinity and San Jacinto rivers and Buffalo bayou. It extends 35 m. N. from the city to the mouth of Trinity R., and has a breadth of from 12 to 18 m. The harbor is the best in the State, and has 13 ft. of water over the bar at low tide. The city is provided with good wharves, and large store-houses adjoining them. The chief business is the shipping of cotton, above 300,000 bales of which are yearly exported. The southern cotton press company owns 14 brick warehouses, each occupying $2\frac{1}{2}$ acres, and the Texas cotton press company, 3 more brick warehouses covering $7\frac{1}{2}$ acres. The other chief articles of export are wool, hides, beeves, peltries, bones, horns, pecan-nuts, beeswax, hair, &c. The value of exports to foreign countries for the year 1880 were \$16,393,877 (of which for cotton \$16,140,841); of imports \$871,938. The number of vessels belonging to the port in 1880 was 200, with an aggregate tonnage of 11,536, including 156 sailing vessels of 5,522 tons, 29 steamers of 3,787 tons, and 15 barges of 2,227 tons. Galveston has 2 libraries (1 numbering 9,000 volumes), 15 churches, 31 schools, a Roman Catholic university, a medical school, an orphanage, 1 savings, 2 nat. and five other banks, 2 iron-foundries, railroad shops, machine shops, gas works, etc., 2 hospitals, 3 daily and 6 wkly papers. No epidemic disease has visited the city since 1867, and the usual health is remarkably good, the climate delightful. Oranges and other tropical fruits grow in the open air, and vegetable gardens flourish all the year. Galveston is the see of a Roman Catholic bishop. Pop. in 1870, 13,818; in 1880, 22,253.

Genesee River, N.Y., rises in Potter co., Pa., within a few yards of the head waters of the Allegheny and the N. branch of the Susquehanna, flows N.W. and N.E. through Allegheny, Wyoming, Livingston, and Monroe counties, N.Y., and falls into Lake Ontario, 7 m. N. of Rochester. Length, abt. 145 m. It is navigable from Lake Ontario to the N. line of Rochester. The river abounds in beautiful scenery, especially in cataracts. In Livingston co., near Portage, are 3 falls within a distance of 2 m., which are respectively 60, 90, and 110 ft. high; and for several miles below these the stream flows between perpendicular banks 400 ft. high. At the S. line of Rochester commences a series of rapids, which terminate in the centre of the city in a sheer fall of 96 ft., called Genesee Falls. Six miles from the mouth of the river is a broken fall of 84 ft., by which the stream reaches the level of the lake. The Genesee is tapped above the rapids to feed the Erie canal, which at Rochester crosses it by a fine limestone aqueduct of nine arches, each of 50 ft. span. The Genesee Valley canal, commencing at Rochester, follows the course of the river for a considerable distance, locks into it at Mt. Morris, and crosses it at Portage by an aqueduct.

Georgetown, D.C., a port of entry, situated on the left bank of the Potomac at the head of navigation, abt. 2½ m. W.N.W. of the capitol of Washington with which it communicates by four iron bridges thrown across Rock Creek. Founded by the colonial Government of Maryland in 1751, Georgetown was a city with a distinct administration from 1789 to 1871; but in the latter year it was merged in the District of Columbia, and in 1878 it was incorporated with the city of Washington, so that now it has properly no distinct existence. It is beautifully situated along a range of hills, whose loftier eminences, locally called the Heights, afford delightful positions for villas and country seats, with extensive prospects over the river and Washington. It contains the Georgetown college, the oldest Catholic college in the U. States, with a library of upwards of 30,000 volumes, an extensive apparatus for physical science, and a museum of natural history; the convent of the visitation with a female academy attached; the Peabody library, the Luthicium institute, &c. A great decline has taken place in the commercial activity of Georgetown. Its foreign trade is very slight; but its share in the coasting trade is still considerable, 146 steamers and 43 sailing vessels, affording an aggregate tonnage of 80,-143 tons having entered in 1880. Its position at the terminus of the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal secures for it a fair share in the shipping of the coal from the Alleghany fields; and its fisheries render it a great market for shad and herrings. It has 6 flour mills, whose products are highly prized. Its p.o. is a branch of that of Washington. Pop. 12,578.

Georgia, a S. state bounded N. by Tennessee and North Carolina, E. by South Carolina and the Atlantic ocean, S. by Florida, and W. by Alabama. The Savannah R. separates the State on the E. from S. C.; the St. Mary's, on the S., divides it in part from Fla.; the Chattahoochee, on the W., flows between Ga. and Ala. for nearly half its course. Ga. lies between lat. 30° 21' 39" and 35° N., and between lon. 81° and 85° 53' 38" W. It is 320 m. long from N. to S., and 250 m. in its greatest breadth from E. to W.; area, 58,980 sq. m. The sea-coast of Ga., like that of the Carolina, is skirted by fertile islands, separated from the mainland by narrow lagoons or by sounds. This section is essentially tropical. Beginning at the sea-coast, a gradually ascending sandy plain extends N. and W. as far as the head of navigation on the Savannah, Ogeechee, Oconee and Ocmulgee Rs., where it meets a primary formation. Augusta, Milledgeville and Macon indicate the N. limit of this tract. Here begins the hilly and finally mountainous region, the most extensive, fertile and salubrious of the State. A second plateau, 60 or 70 m. broad, stretches above the falls of the rivers until it meets the southernmost ranges of the great Appalachian chain of mountains which traverses Virginia, North Carolina, and northern Ga., under the name of the Blue Ridge, and is finally lost in Alabama. This picturesque district extends in Ga. from Rabun Co. in the N. E. corner of the State to Dade in the extreme N. W., where the summit of Lookout Mountain dominates the valley of the Tennessee. Here are the sources of the two principal rivers of the State; here is the gold producing region; and here is also the theatre of some of the most sanguinary battles of the civil war. The elevations of the Blue Ridge vary from 1,200 to 4,000 feet. In the S. E. of the State is the extensive Okefinokee swamp, which has an estimated circumference of 180 m., is filled with pools and islands, and is the congenial home of alligators, lizards, and other reptiles. There are many fine rivers in Ga. A north and south line passing through Macon would nearly divide the streams flowing into the Atlantic from those discharging into the Gulf of Mexico. The Savannah, Ogeechee, Altamaha, Santilla, and St. Mary's fall into the Atlantic, and the Chattahoochee, Flint, and tributaries of the Suwanee flow to the Gulf coast. Ga. has about 128 m. of sea-coast, but has few good harbors, except within the rivers emptying upon it. St. Mary's, Brunswick, Darien, and Savannah are the principal. The chain of islands lying off the mainland produces the celebrated sea-island cotton, but owing to the changes brought about by the Secession war it is now little cultivated.—The central and southern portions of Ga., including the seaboard, are subject to excessive heats in summer. At Savannah observations show the mean temperature for July to have sometimes reached 99° Fahr. In the northern district of the State the same season is cooler and less enervating. Indeed, the mountain region is becoming noted for its genial and healthful climate, and is attracting invalids and pleasure-seekers from all parts of the Union. In the low, marshy lands lying contiguous to or upon the coast, malarial fevers prevail in spring and summer. The belt of country stretching from Augusta across the State to Columbus, having a width of from 30 to 60 m., is pronounced a very healthy district. At Augusta the mean summer temperature is about 79°, the winter 47°. At Atlanta careful observations give the average of summer heat as 75°, and winter 45°. The interior is comparatively free from the dreaded epidemics cholera and yellow fever, but Savannah and the coast are periodically scourged by them.—There is in Ga. as great diversity of soil as of climate. Beginning with the Sea Islands, which are composed of a sandy alluvium, intermixed with decomposed coral, we pass from the rich alluvions near the coast, in which the great rice plantations are, to the thinner soil of the Pine Belt, sometimes inaptly denominated Pine Barrens. These are at present valuable for their timber and naval stores, but are susceptible of cultivation. The middle region consists of a red loam, once productive, but from long cultivation impoverished. With the aid of fertilizers it produces cotton, tobacco and cereals. We now reach the so-called Cherokee country of the north, containing lands among the most fertile in the State, lands which, notwithstanding their tillage from an unknown period by the aboriginal inhabitants, grow wheat, corn, Irish potatoes, pease, beans, etc., abundantly. Cotton may also be successfully cultivated, but with less advantage than in other districts of the State. This fibre is chiefly produced along the fertile bottom-lands or contiguous uplands of the rivers. The same lands yield rice, Indian corn and sugar. Middle and S. W. Ga. are the most productive cotton areas. In the S. W. the soil, though light and sandy, produces cotton. In S. Ga. there are millions of acres of magnificent yellow pine forests of great value for house or ship-building, and in these forests turpentine plantations have been opened. The live-oak, also valuable for shipbuilding purposes, abounds in the S. E. of the State. The swamps afford cedar and cypress, the central region oak and hickory. All the fruits of the temperate zone succeed well in Ga. Cotton is the great crop of Ga. She ranks second among the cotton States. The principal products for the year 1880 were as follows:

PRODUCTS.	Quantity produced.	Number of acres.	Total valuation.
Indian corn, bushels	21,939,240	2,384,700	$15,198,076
Wheat	3,055,374	484,980	4,155,309
Rye	156,702	26,117	192,743
Oats	6,184,700	618,470	4,638,525
Barley	22,230	1,486	13,820
Potatoes	441,600	4,800	485,760
Rice	25,369,687	34,973	2,030,344
Hay	34,650	18,431	554,400
Cotton	454,166,900	2,786,300	45,416,690
Total	6,325,284	$72,625,667

In 1881 there were on farms 121,584 horses, 199,182 mules, 273,100 milch cows, 408,816 oxen and other cattle, 378,144 sheep, and 1,701,660 hogs.—Ga. is equally rich in minerals. Iron ores of the very best quality abound in various parts of the State. Copper occurs in the northern districts, known as the Cherokee country, and numerous mines have been opened; a few of which only are worked with profit. Gold is found in limited quantities, and, before the Cal. discovery was considered of sufficient importance to supply a U. States Mint at Dahlonega with the metal. The yield of gold for the year 1882 was $125,000. There are also mines of manganese, soapstone, mica, asbestos, barytes, kaolin, lime, slate, marl, &c.—Ga. is the foremost southern State in her railroad and manufacturing enterprises. Both have been chiefly developed since the war. Her rivers and railways afford abundant facilities for the movement of merchandise as well as crops. Her streams also provide excellent and unfailling water-power. In the development of her industries a great future is predicted for Ga. Indeed, some of the more sanguine claim that she is already becoming a formidable rival of New England in the manufacture of cotton and woolen fabrics. Ga. had, in 1880, 3,593 manufacturing establishments, employing 24,875 hands; capital invested, $20,672,410; wages paid during the year, $5,266,152; value of materials, $24,143,939; value of products, $36,440,948. Among them were 40 cotton-mills whose aggregate capital was $6,348,657; spindles, 198,656; looms, 4,493. Ga. had, in 1882, 2,581 m. of railroad in operation.—The State is divided into 136 cos., viz.: Appling, Baker, Baldwin, Banks, Bartow, Berrien, Bibb, Brooks, Bryan, Bullock, Burke, Butts, Calhoun, Campbell, Camden, Carroll, Cass, Catoosa, Charlton, Chatham, Chattahoochee, Chattooga, Clarke, Cherokee, Clay, Clayton, Clinch, Cobb, Collee, Colquitt, Columbia, Cowetta, Crawford, Dade, Dawson, Decatur, De Kalb, Dodge, Dooley, Dougherty, Douglas, Early, Echols, Effingham, Elbert, Emmanuel, Fannin, Fayette, Floyd, Forsyth, Franklin, Fulton, Gilmer, Glascock, Glynn, Gordon, Greene, Gwinnett, Habersham, Hall, Hancock, Haralson, Harris, Hart, Heard, Henry, Houston, Irwin, Jackson, Jasper, Jefferson, Johnson, Jones, Laurens, Lee, Liberty, Lincoln, Lowndes, Lumpkin, Macon, Madison, Marion, McDuffie, McIntosh, Meriwether, Miller, Milton, Mitchell, Monroe, Montgomery, Morgan, Murray, Muscogee, Newton, Oglethorpe, Paulding, Pickens, Pierce, Pike, Polk, Pulaski, Putnam, Quitman, Rabun, Randolph, Richmond, Rockdale, Schley, Scriven, Spaulding, Stewart, Sumter, Talbot, Taliaferro, Tatnall, Taylor,

Telfare, Terrell, Thomas, Towns, Troupe, Twigg, Union, Upson, Walker, Walton, Ware, Warren, Washington, Wayne, Webster, White, Whitfield, Wilcox, Wilkes, Wilkinson, and Worth. There are eight cities, viz.: Savannah (the chief sea-port), Atlanta (the cap.), Augusta, Macon, Columbus, Athens, Milledgeville, and Rome. The important towns are Albany, Americus, Bainbridge, Brunswick, Cartersville, Covington, Cuthbert, Dalton, Dawson, Eatonton, Fort Valley, Griffin, La Grange, Marietta, Newnan, Thomasville, Valdosta, Washington, and West Point, Columbus. Andersonville, in Sumter co., acquired terrible celebrity during the civil war as the site of the chief military prison of the Southern Confederacy; Atlanta is a railway and manufacturing centre. In the vicinity and for its possession were conducted some of the most important military operations of the secession war.—The legislative authority is vested in a general assembly, consisting of a senate of 44 members, and a house of representatives of 175 members. The legislature meets annually. The governor and other executive officers hold office for a term of four years. The judicial authority is vested in a supreme court of three judges, 19 circuit courts, and county courts for the most populous counties. Ga. sends 10 representatives to the Federal Congress, and has 12 electoral votes. The valuation of taxable property for the year 1880 was $238,934,126 (real estate $139,657,250, personal property $99,276,876).—Previous to the war there was no common school in Ga. Although a plan of public instruction was organized at an earlier date, it was not given effect until 1873. Schools are now to be found in every co. in the State. The attendance in 1880 was: White pupils, 150,134; colored, 86,429. There are a large number of colleges in the State. The State University at Athens, with its branches at Milledgeville, Dahlonega, Cuthbert, Thomasville, and Augusta, taught in 1880 a grand aggregate of 1,288 pupils. There are male colleges at Covington, Oxford and Macon, and female colleges at Macon, Covington, Greensboro, Lagrange, Newnan, Dalton, and Rome, and high schools at other points. There are also institutions for the blind (at Rome), and for the deaf and dumb (near Rome).—Of the 13 provinces which declared themselves independent in 1776, Ga. was the latest settled (1773); it was named in honor of George II. An ordinance of secession was passed Jan. 19, 1861. Gen. Sherman made his march through Ga. in 1864. The State was readmitted into the Union in July, 1867. A new constitution was adopted in 1877. Pop. in 1790, 82,548; in 1820, 340,433; in 1860, 1,057,286; in 1870, 1,184,109; in 1880, 1,542,180 (of whom 762,931 males, and 779,199 females; 1,531,616 natives, and 10,564 of foreign birth; 816,906 whites, 725,133 colored, 17 Chinese, and 124 Indians.)

Gila (Gila), Ariz. and N. Mex., a river which rises in the Sierra Madre Mts., in Socorro co., N. Mex., flows S.W. to near Ariz., where it bends S. and then flows W. through that territory to its junction with the Colorado, of which it is the principal tributary, abt. 180 m. above its mouth. Its sources are abt. 5,000 ft. above the sea. The principal tributaries from the N. are the Rio Nutroso, Prieto, Bonito, San Carlos, Salt R., or Rio Salado, and Agua Franca Creek; from the S. the Rio San Domingo and San Pedro. For more than half its entire length, which is nearly 500 m., the Gila passes through mountains, and in some places is unapproachable, being buried between walls of perpendicular rock nearly 1,000 ft. high. It emerges from the mountains in lon. 111° 55' W., after which its course is through an open and comparatively level country to its termination. In the last 300 m. it has an average fall of 5 ft. per mile, and averages 60 ft. in width, 3 ft. in depth, and in velocity 2 m. an hour. In the lower portion the valley is from 1 to 3 m. wide; abt. 150 m. from its mouth there is a considerable bend to the N. where the valley for 25 m. is from 5 to 10 m. wide. Gold and silver are found near the banks of the Gila. The ruined edifices, broken pottery, and traces of irrigating canals found along this river, show that its former population was much larger than at present. About 200 m. from the Colorado, in one of the finest portions of the valley, is the reservation of Maricopa and Pimo Indians. It is intersected in all directions by irrigating canals, and produces abundant crops.

Gloucester, Mass., a city ✱ and port of entry, Essex co., beautifully situated near the S. extremity of the peninsula of Cape Ann, 30 m. N.N.E. Boston by rail. It includes six villages—Gloucester village, East Gloucester, West Gloucester, Amisquam, Bay View and Lanesville. The harbor, opening out into Massachusetts Bay, is one of the best on the coast, and is defended by a fort. The prosperity of Gloucester depends mainly on its cod and mackerel fisheries, which employ nearly 400 vessels, with upwards of 3,500 men, and have an annual value of about 4,000,000 dollars. In 1882 there were 492 vessels of 28,534 tons, in aggregate, belonging to this port. Steamers ply daily between the city and Boston. There are a number of manufactories connected chiefly with the fisheries, and in the neighborhood there are extensive granite quarries. Gloucester possesses a fine city hall, 16 churches, a high school, 7 grammar schools, a free library, 4 nat. and 1 savings bank, and 2 wkly papers. On account of its attractive situation, and the fine scenery of the neighborhood, it is a favorite summer residence. About 2 miles from it is Norman's Woe, the scene of the wreck of the "Hesperus," celebrated in Longfellow's poem. Gloucester was occupied as a fishing station in 1624, was incorporated as a town in 1642, and was made a city in 1874. Pop. 19,320.

Gloucester, N. J., a S.W. co., separated by the Delaware R. from Pa., on the N.W., drained by Big Thuber, Oldman's, Raccoon and Mantua Creeks; area, 280 sq. m. The surface is generally level, and much of it covered with forests. The soil along the banks of the Delaware, and for abt. 7 m. inland consists of clayey loam, productive and well cultivated. Marl is found here, and iron ore is obtained near Woodbury. The S.E. part of the co. is sandy, and mostly unimproved. The chief prod. in 1880 were 675,653 bush. of corn, 108,154 of wheat, 29,299 of oats, 27,473 of rye, and 4,666 of buckwheat. Cap. Woodbury. Val. of taxable prop. $16,283,463. Pop. 25,880 (of whom 1,738 for., and 1,144 colored).

Gloucester, Va., a S.E. co., bordering on Chesapeake Bay, bounded N. by the Pamkatank and S. by York R.; area, 289 sq. m. The surface is level and the soil light and productive. Among the most important exports are oysters and fish, the taking of which employs large numbers of the inhabitants, and wood, which is sent to New York and Philadelphia. The chief prod. in 1880 were 177,610 bush. of corn, 30,907 of wheat, and 20,202 of oats. Cap., Gloucester Court-House. Val. of taxable prop. abt. $2,000,000. Pop. 11,876 (of whom 34 for., and 6,535 colored).

Grand River, Col. and Utah, one of the constituents of the Colorado of the West, rises in the Rocky Mts. in Col., 5 or 6 m. W. of Long's Peak, in abt. lat. 40° 17' N., lon. 105° 43' W. It pursues a general S.W. course of abt. 350 m., and joins the Green in Utah. It bends S. just before entering Utah, and then N. as it crosses the boundary, resuming its general direction. The only important tributary from the N. is Mill Creek, which joins the main stream near its source. From the S. it receives the Blue R. (which, rising near the base of Mt. Lincoln, has by some been regarded as the true source of the Grand), Piney Creek, Roaring Fork, the Gunnison or South Fork (the largest tributary), and the San Miguel and Dolores Rs., which unite and empty into the Grand just beyond the Utah border. It flows through a mountainous region, forming deep and precipitous cañons.

Grand River, Dak., rises in the W. part of the territory, flows E. for abt. 200 m., and empties into the Missouri in abt. lat. 45° 37' N.

Grand River (Ind. name Washtenong), Mich., the largest river which lies wholly in that State. It rises in the S.E. part of the lower peninsula, in two branches, which unite near Jackson and after a N.W. and W. course of about 270 m., including its numerous windings, it discharges into Lake Michigan at Grand Haven. It is about 950 ft. wide at its mouth, and deep enough for vessels of less than 12 ft. draught. Steamboats ascend 40 m. to the rapids, where the river has a fall of 18 ft. in a mile; and small boats ply between the head of the rapids and Lyons, about 50 m. further. The principal affluents are the Rogue, Flat, Maple, Looking-Glass and Red Cedar from the N., and the Thorn Apple from the S.; Jackson, Lansing, Grand Rapids and Grand Haven are the chief towns on its banks.

Grand River, Miss., an affluent of the Missouri R. Its head-streams rise in Iowa. With its numerous forks it drains a large part of Northern Missouri. Its mouth is at Brunswick in Chariton co. Total length abt. 300 m.—Another GRAND RIVER is a N.W. fork of the Osage, which it joins in Benton co., after a S.E. course of abt. 140 m.

Great Basin, or FREMONT BASIN, the region extending W. from the Wahsatch Mts. to the Sierra Nevada, measuring some 300 m. N. and S., and 350 E. and W., and including nearly all of Nevada, a great part of Utah, a large area in California, and small parts of Wyoming, Idaho, and Oregon. Its waters do not reach the sea, hence it is called a basin. It is however, in reality, a series of basins, mostly long, broken N. and S. valleys lying between rugged mountain ranges. Across these ridges and valleys the valley of the Humboldt R. strikes diagonally, affording the only practicable railroad route from E. to W.—the route of the C.P.R.R. The climate is very dry, and agriculture is not practicable without irrigation. The streams are small, and important only for irrigation and mining purposes. The Humboldt, Carson, Bear, Jordan, Provo, Beaver, Sevier, and Weber rivers are the largest. Great Salt Lake is the largest body of water, and Utah Lake is the principal fresh-water lake. The other lakes, some of them mere "sinks" or marshy places, are partly salt and partly fresh, while some are composed of highly complex chemical solutions, like Mono Lake in California. The climate is generally healthful. There is a considerable grazing industry. Gold, silver, lead, borax, salt, sulphur, and soda salts are abundant, and the mining interest is important.

Great Salt Lake, Utah, the principal body of water in the Great Fremont Basin, and one of the most remarkable lakes on the globe, lies between lat. 40° 40' and 41° 45' N., lon. 111° 50' and 113° 10' W. It is 70 m. long, 45 m. broad, and 4,250 ft. above the sea-level, and is slowly rising. It contains numerous rocky islands, some seven of which are of considerable size. Antelope Island, the largest, being abt. 18 m. long. Its maximum depth is 60 ft.; mean depth, 12 ft. Some of the islands are used as sheep pastures. The lake is doubtless much smaller than formerly. It is navigated by a line of steamers from Corinne to Black Rock, on the S. shore. Its water contains 20.196 per cent. of common salt, 1.834 of sodic sulphate, 0.252 of magnesium chloride, and a trace of calcium-chloride. Its specific gravity is 1.170, almost exactly that of the Dead Sea; but, unlike that sea, it abounds in animal life. Its area is 1,900 sq. m. Bear R. is its principal tributary, but is too small for navigation, except near its mouth.

Great South Bay, N. Y., commences at the New Inlet, 25 m. E. of New York City and extends 50 m. along the S. coast of Long Island. It is from 1 to five m. wide, and affords good navigation. It is enclosed by a narrow strip of land called Great South Beach.

Green Mountains, the N. part of the Appalachian chain. It commences at West Rock, near New Haven, Conn., and passing through the W. parts of Conn. and Mass., and holding a middle course in Vt., between Lake Champlain and Connecticut R., extends to the borders of Canada. In its S. part, this chain is not entirely continuous, but can readily be traced; but from the N. line of Mass. to Montpelier, Vt., the range continues lofty and unbroken through by any considerable stream. S. from Montpelier two ranges extend, one N.E. nearly parallel with the Connecticut R., dividing the waters flowing E. from those flowing W.; and the other, which is the higher and more broken, extending nearly N. and near Lake Champlain. Through this range the Onion, Lamoille, and Missisque Rs. make their way toward the lake. Among the principal peaks are Mt. Mansfield, 20 m. N.W. Montpelier, 4,279 ft. above the sea; Camel's Hump, 17 m. W. of Montpelier, 4,188 ft.; Killington peak, near Rutland, 3,924 ft.; and Asectuey, in Windsor co., near the Connecticut R., 3,320 ft. Particular names are locally applied to the part of the range going through Mass. and Conn.; as the Hoosac Mts. in Mass. for that portion lying between the Connecticut and Housatonic Rs., and constituting the most elevated portion of the State, and the Taconic Mts. for the W. part of the range, along the New York line. The Green Mts. neither forms the marked uniformity of elevation and parallel of its ridges that characterizes the Appalachian chain further S.; nor have these the abruptness and precipitous outlines of the granite summits of the White Mts. They give name (from the French monts verts) to the State of Vermont, and constitute its most prominent feature.

Green River, Col. and Utah, one of the constituents of the Colorado of the West. It rises in the Rocky Mts. near Fremont's peak, in the W. part of Wyo., in abt. lat. 43° 15' N., lon. 109° 45' W., flows S., turns S.E. through the N.E. corner of Utah, entering the N.W. corner of Col., then bends S.W. and reenters Utah, and afterward pursues a general S. course to its junction with the Grand. Its entire course is abt. 500 m. for the greater part through deep and precipitous cañons. It first enters the Uintah Mts. in the extreme N.W. corner of Colorado, at a point called Flaming Gorge just below which the walls of the cañon are nearly 1,500 ft. high. The stream is swift, the descent being in places 20 ft. to the mile. Rapids and cataracts, some of them of great height, are frequent. There is generally on the one side or the other a narrow strip of land forming the valley of the river, but for considerable distances the walls rise perpendicularly from the water's edge to the height of 5,000 or 6,000 ft., and at one point of 6,500 ft.

Green River, Ill., rises in Winnebago Swamp, in the N. part of Bureau co., flows W. across Henry co., and empties into Rock R., abt. 10 m. S.E. Rock Island.

—v., Henry co., 7 m. from Port Byron. Pop. 125.

Green River, Ky., rises in Lincoln co., flows W. past the Mammoth cave, and after receiving Big Barron R., bends N.W. and enters the Ohio 9 m. above Evansville, Ind.; length, nearly 300 m. It is 200 yards wide at its mouth, and in the lower part of its course is navigable by steamboats at all seasons, while, by means of dams and locks, small steam vessels can ascend to Greensburg, a distance of 200 m. The upper part of its valley is occupied by cavernous limestone, and the lower abounds in coal.

Green River, Mass., rises in Windham co., Vt., and joins the Deerfield R. at Greenfield. It affords good water-power, and there is fine scenery on its banks.—Another Green R. flows from Hancock, Mass., through Williamstown, into the Hoosac.—Still a third rises on the borders of Mass. and New York, flows S. through West Stockbridge, Alford, and Great Barrington, and joins the Housatonic R. near the N. boundary of Sheffield.

- Gulf of Mexico, a large inland sea washing the shore of the U. States and Mexico, connected by the Florida channel with the N. Atlantic ocean, and by the channel of Yucatan with the Caribbean Sea, situated between lat. 18° and 31° N., and between lon. 81° and 98° W. Length from E. to W., 1,200 m., average breadth, 650 m.; area, abt. 800,000 sq. m. This sea, which is of an irregular circular shape, is, unlike the Carribean Sea, almost clear of shoals and islands, none being found except on the coasts of Yucatan and Florida. Along the coasts of Mexico its soundings are very regular, with 100 fathoms at a distance of 30 m. from the shore. On the N. side, and especially opposite the mouths of the Mississippi, the depth is considerably diminished and at its E. extremity the navigation is rendered intricate and dangerous by the Tortugas bank, Florida reef, and various other keys, shoals, and inlets, including the great Bahama bank, which surround the N. coast of Cuba. The E. trade winds prevail from April to October, being usually the wet season; the Nortes begin in October, but are not violent till the middle of November, from which time till the end of February they blow with great fury, and are objects of much dread to navigators. These gales last for four or five, and occasionally even ten days; but their extreme fierceness is usually spent in the first 48 hours. At these times the larger vessels, which cannot enter the shallow harbors of the Mexican coast, are obliged to slip their anchors, and keep as far as possible off shore. Examples are not wanting also of nortes happening between May and August, at which time they are particularly furious. Luckily, however, the hurricanes and tornadoes of the gulf are by no means so fierce and destructive as those in the Carribean sea. The principal current of the gulf of Mexico, and the only one worth mention, is the remarkable gulf stream, which sets W.N.W. between cape St. Antonio and cape Catoche; this runs from 12 to 30 m. a day, and is perceptible even during the nortes, except close along the shores of Mexico. At the N.W. extremity of the gulf its course gradually changes, till, at the mouth of the Mississippi, it turns E., and afterward S.E., as it again rushes out into the Atlantic ocean, at the rate of 80 m. in the 24 hours. The tides of the gulf of Mexico are of no great importance, they nowhere exceed 3 or 4 ft.; but their average rise is not more than 2 ft. The color of the water is a deep indigo, darker or more intense than that of the ocean; phosphorescent lights shines on it with great brilliancy, and between the coasts of Yucatan and Louisiana great quantities of Lucas natans occur in parallel lines from S.S.E. to N.N.W., and are carried out in large masses through the Straits of Florida.

Harlem River, N. Y., is properly not a river at all but a narrow arm of Long Island Sound, forming with Spuyten Duyvil Creek a tidal channel between Long Island Sound and the Hudson R. It begins opposite Randall's Island and runs in a N.W. direction until a short distance above the point where it is crossed by McComb's Dam or Central Bridge, when it curves to the N. and continues in that direction until near where Spuyten Duyvil Creek begins. With the creek it divides Manhattan Island from the mainlands. Its entire length, as the channel winds, is abt. 7 m. About half the distance nearest Long Island Sound is navigable for vessels of less than 10 ft. draught, but the upper half is much shallower. It is crossed at Harlem by an iron drawbridge and a railroad bridge, by Central Bridge, by High Bridge, and by King's Bridge.

Harper's Ferry, W. Va., p.v. ✚, Jefferson co., is grandly situated at the foot of Bolivar heights and at the confluence of the Shenandoah and Potomac Rs., where they intersect the Blue Ridge, 45 m. N.W. Washington. It is the junction-point of the B. & O. and its H.F. & V. branch, 97 m. E. of Cumberland; and the Ohio and Chesapeake canal passes along the Maryland side of the Potomac R. The village since the civil war has been in a decaying condition. It is the seat of Stover College, for students of color. Previous to the war Harper's Ferry contained an extensive arsenal and armory, and during the war it was the scene of several exploits which have given it a name in history. On the 16th October, 1859, it was seized by John Brown, the abolitionist, who was overpowered on the 18th and taken prisoner. April, 1861, it was captured by the Confederates, who on evacuating it in June destroyed the arsenal and armory and the bridge across the Potomac. The village was afterwards held by a Union garrison of 12,000 men, who, however, on the 15th September, 1862, after a brave resistance of several days, surrendered to a strong Confederate force under Jackson and A. P. Hill. After the battle of Antietam, on the 17th of the same month, it was reoccupied by the army of the Potomac under General McClellan. In June, 1863, it was again abandoned to the Confederates. After their defeat at Gettysburg, the town again fell into the hands of the Federal troops, who held it until the demonstration against Washington in July, 1864. After the battle of Monocacy on July 9th it was occupied by the United States forces, and held by them until the end of the war. The most flourishing part of the town was nearly destroyed by a flood in the Shenandoah, October, 1878. Pop. 764; of tp. 1,219.

Harrisburg, Pa., a city ♦, cap. of Dauphin co. and of the State, is beautifully situated on the E. bank of Susquehanna R., on the Penn. Canal, and at the junction of several railways, 126 m. by rail N. of Washington and 105 W. by N. from Philadelphia. The river, which is here a mile in width, is crossed by two bridges, one of which is for the use of the railroads. Two other bridges of great beauty and strength span the river in view of the State house. The capitol, dating from 1819, occupies an eminence in the centre of the busiest portion of the city, and is a brick edifice, 180 ft. long by 80 ft. wide. Among the other public buildings are the co. Court-house, the State arsenal, the co. prison, and the opera-house. Harrisburg is a bishop's see of the Roman Catholic Church. It is well provided with academies and schools, and possesses about 30 churches, several of which are costly and ornamented edifices. It is also the seat of the State library of over 40,000 volumes. Among the benevolent institutions are the city hospital, the home for the friendless, and the State lunatic hospital. An abundant water supply is obtained from the river. Coal and iron are largely wrought in the neighborhood, and the great facilities of communication both by canal and railroad have enabled the city to become one of the centres of the iron trade. It possesses large iron-foundries, manuf. of steel, machines, boilers, engines, carriages, nails, files, galvanized iron, brooms, soap, and shoes, rolling mills, saw and planing mills, flour mills, cotton mills, potteries, tanneries, and breweries. It is the 5th city in the State. Pop. in 1860, 13,400; in 1870, 23,104; in 1880, 30,762.

Hartford, a city, the cap. of Hartford co., and of the State. It is situated on the W. bank of the Connecticut R., 60 m. from Long Island Sound, at the head of steamboat and sloop navigation, and 100 m. N.E. New York, and 95 W.S.W. Boston by rail. An important centre of railway communication, it has also a regular line of steamboats and packets, besides some 200 sailing craft engaged in the coasting trade. The river is usually closed from the middle of December to the middle of March, and at the breaking up of the ice in spring sometimes rises 29 feet. The city is intersected by the sluggish and dirty Park R., which is spanned by 10 bridges. A covered toll bridge, 1,000 feet long, across the Connecticut R., connects the city with East Hartford. The city is for the most part compactly built of brick, granite, and freestone—the public buildings and those of many private corporations being elegant and substantial. The new State-house occupies a capacious building of white marble in the modern Gothic style, costing over $3,100,000, and standing conspicuously in the midst of the city, on a slight elevation, at the south side of Bushnell Park (a beautiful area of 46 acres). Wadsworth's Tower, on Taleott Mountain, to the N.W., affords one of the finest views in New England. Hartford is a healthy city, and its mean annual temperature is 50° Fahr. The city is divided into 8 wards, and is governed by a mayor and 16 aldermen, elected biennially, and 32 councilmen elected annually. The water supply is from four reservoirs in West Hartford, with a capacity of 1,208,450,367 gallons. Hartford has a paid fire department, and seven steam fire-engines. The principal business of the city is insurance. There are 9 fire insurance companies, 8 life insurance companies, and 1 accident insurance company, 10 nat. banks, 11 other banks, and 4 savings banks. There are also, exclusive of railroads, 73 mechanical and manuf. corporations, though several of the larger ones have their works in adjacent towns. Some of them have a world wide reputation, as the Colt Fire-arms Company, with works occupying grounds of 123 acres. They also include carpet, linen, and silk works, and a manufactory of edgedtools. The publication of books too is a considerable interest. A very important branch of trade is the sale of leaf tobacco, which is the chief crop of the Connecticut R. valley. There are 36 churches and 15 chapels of all denominations, including a fine Jewish synagogue. Here, too, is the seat of the Roman Catholic bishop, and the headquarters, in the U. S., of the Chinese educational commission. Beside the 17 public schools, there are 43 educational and charitable corporations, several of them of notable importance, especially of Trinity College (Episcopal), founded in 1823, the Theological Institute of Connecticut (Congregational), founded in 1834, the Hartford high and grammar school, founded in 1855, the Watkinson library of reference, with 34,000 volumes; the rooms and library of the Connecticut Historical Society, with its valuable collection of relics, books, and MSS., the young men's institute, a circulating library of 27,000 volumes; the very complete State Law Library at the State-house; the American asylum for the deaf and dumb, retreat for the insane, Hartford hospital and orphan asylum. There are 3 daily, 7 wkly, and 4 monthly papers. Hartford was known to the aborigines as Suckkiang; it was first permanently settled in 1635 by emigrants from eastern Massachusetts, and called Newtown. In 1637 it was named Hartford after Hartford in England. The city was incorporated in 1784, and in 1873 it became the sole cap. of Connecticut. Pop. in 1870, 37,180; in 1880, 42,015.

The city is abt. 12 m. in length on the river and 3 m. in breadth, bordering on New Hampshire. Within its limits are several hills commanding extensive and beautiful views, and 4 lakes, from 2 of which it draws its supply of water. The thickly settled portion is pleasantly built on a gentle acclivity, presenting with its neat shaded dwellings and background of hills a remarkably attractive appearance. Haverhill is noted for the manuf. of boots and shoes, which is the principal industry, and in which it is surpassed only by Lynn. There are abt. 175 firms engaged in the business, the annual shipments being worth abt. $10,000,000. The number of hands employed is from 6,000 to 8,000, many of whom are Canadian French. The goods manuf. here are principally for women's misses', and children's wear, and are sold chiefly in the west and south. There are also various factories, 4 nat. and 2 savings banks, 3 daily and 3 wkly papers, a public library, a young men's Christian association, &c. Haverhill was settled in 1645 and chartered as a city in 1870. Pop. in 1870, 13,002; in 1880, 18,475.

Hoboken, N. J., a city ♦, Hudson co., on the W. side of Hudson R., directly opposite New York city, and adjoining Jersey City, of which it is the continuity north road along the river, though it is yet an independent municipality. Hoboken is a suburb of New York city, very popular with the Germans, who form the bulk of the population. It stretches along the foot of a steep hill which rises within about half a mile of the river front. Four lines of European steamers start from this point, and the M. & E. and the D., L. & W. RRs. have their E. termini here, and connect the city with all the great railroad systems S. and W. of New York city. Its trade in coal is extensive, it being one of the principal depôts from which New York city and its shipping are supplied. It has 3 good public schools, several academies, 12 churches, 3 wkly papers, the St. Mary's Hospital, 2 savings and 1 nat. bank, several foundries, and a large lead pencil factory. Prominent among its academies is the Stevens Institute of Technology, which has very extensive, expensive, and complete apparatus and arrangements for teaching the natural sciences and their applications to the arts and industries. Its principal industries are connected with the European steamers and the coal-docks. Pop. 30,999.

Hudson, or NORTH RIVER, one of the largest and noblest rivers of the U. States, and the principal river of the State of New York, is formed by the confluence of two small streams which rise in the Adirondack Mts. in Essex co. About the middle of Warren co. the river is joined by another of nearly equal size, the Schroon, which also has its rise in Essex co. After receiving the Sacondaga R. 10 m. further S., the Hudson flows irregularly in an E. direction to Sandy Hill, after which it keeps a very straight course almost due S. until it falls into New York Bay. At Troy it receives the Mohawk, whose volume of water is greater than its own, and at Kingston the Wallkill, but its other tributaries, though numerous, are unimportant. Its total length is abt. 200 m., and the length of its course from Sandy Hill 190 m. At Glen's Falls near Sandy Hill, it makes a precipitous descent of 50 ft., whence there are various rapids of different velocities until it reaches Troy. It is tidal nearly up to Troy, and the fall from Albany, 6 m. below Troy, to the mouth of the river, a distance of 145 m., is only 5 ft. By means of a lock and dam it is navigable to Waterford, a short distance above Troy, but large steamers do not proceed further up than Hudson, 29 m. below Albany, and 116 from the mouth of the river. A short distance below Albany the navigation has been obstructed by shifting sands, the point at which the difficulties are most formidable being the "over-slaughter" at Castleton, but extensive operations have been for some time carried on in order to effect a permanent remedy for the obstructions. The scenery of the river is for the most part varied and beautiful, generally picturesque, and in many places in the highest degree striking and magnificent. In the upper part the views though not tame are a little mon-otomous, the gently sloping hills, with the variegated colors of wood and cultivated land and the occasional occurrence of a town or village, repeating one another without any marked feature to break their regularity. Below Troy, for a considerable distance, the number of islands renders much care in navigation necessary. Thirty m. from Troy noble views begin to be obtained of the Catskill Mts., towering up on the W. bank, the nearest eminence at the distance of abt. 7 m. Forty-six m. below Catskill is the large and flourishing city of Poughkeepsie, and 14 m. further down the prosperous city of Newburg, a short distance below which, at the favorite summer resort of Cornwall Landing, the river enters the highlands, passing between a series of hills whose frequently precipitous sides rise often abruptly from the water's edge. The views in this part of the river are of a character in some respects unparalleled, and at several points they have an impressiveness and surprising grandeur rarely equaled. The distance through which the river traverses this mountain scenery is abt. 16 m., and abt. 10 m. after it is entered, West Point is reached, a favorite landing-place of tourists, the seat of the U. States military academy. After passing the pretty town of Peekskill the river widens into Haverstraw Bay, at the extremity of which is the headland of Croton Point. Below is the wider expanse of Tappan Bay, upon which stands Tarrytown. At Piermont, where the bay ends, the range named the Palisades rises picturesquely from the water to the height of between 300 and 500 ft., extending along the W. bank for abt. 20 m., the left bank being level and dotted with hamlets and villas. At the mouth of the river on the W. bank are Hoboken and Jersey City, and on the E. bank

 New York city. By the Erie Canal the river is connected with Lake Erie, by the Champlain Canal with Lake Champlain, and by the Delaware Canal with the Delaware R.; and its commercial importance as a means of traffic is not excelled by that of any other river in the world. The H. R.R. skirts the E. bank of the river from New York to Troy, whence it bends eastward on its way to Lake Champlain. The Hudson has some valuable fisheries, the principal fish being bass, shad, and sturgeon. The attempts to stock it with salmon have not been very successful. Though Verrazzani in 1524 proceeded up the river Hudson a short distance in a boat, the first to demonstrate its extent and importance was Henry Hudson, from whom it derives its name. He sailed above the mouth of the Mohawk in September, 1609.

Hudson, N.Y., a N.E. co., bounded E. by Hudson R. and New York harbor; area, 180 sq. m. Its eastern border is marked by the Palisades, a remarkable ridge of trap-rock. The co. is almost entirely suburban to New York city, and its chief agricultural prod. are market vegetables. It is traversed by numerous railroads, centering at Jersey City and Hoboken, its largest cities. Cap., Jefferson City. Val. of taxable prop. abt. $160,000,000. Pop. 187,950 (of whom 65,567 for., and 1,696 colored).

—a former scattered city of above co., now included in Jersey City, lying on the summit of the hill rising behind Hoboken, abt. 3 m. W. of New York city. It includes the localities still known as Union Hill, West Hoboken, and Bergen Hill.

—a city, the cap. of Columbia co., on the left bank of Hudson R., at the head of ship navigation, 1½ m. N. of New York city, and 28 m. E. of Albany by H.R.R.R. It stands on the ridge of a picturesque elevation called Prospect Hill, which, after rising abruptly 60 ft. from the river, slopes gradually to an elevation of 500 ft. The high river bank projects into the river in the form of a bold promontory, affording a delightful promenade, and having on either side a fine bay with depth of water sufficient for the largest ships. The wharves are situated at the foot of the promontory and along the margin of these bays. Works to supply the city with water have lately been constructed at a cost of $250,000. The principal buildings are the court-house, constructed of marble and limestone and surmounted by a dome, the city hall and post-office, and the academy. The city has 3 public libraries, 3 nat. banks, 2 daily and 2 wkly papers. It at one time vied as a trading port with New York, and, although both its West India trade and its whale fishing have now been abandoned, it still carries on an important river trade, and has regular steam communication with New York and Albany. It also possesses large iron smelting works, a stove foundry, a tannery, a flour mill, breweries, iron foundries, and factories for pianos, carriages, paper, car wheels, and steam fire engines. Hudson was settled in 1784, being then known as Claverack Landing. It became a city in 1785. Pop. 8,669.

Humboldt River, Nev., the longest stream of that State, rises in Elko co., and flows 384 m. in a generally S.W. course. Its waters are alkaline, being charged with soda. It is nowhere many yards in width, and is generally fordable. It finally ends in Humboldt Sink, "a marshy spot in a sandy plain," not really a lake except in high stages of the river. The river is chiefly remarkable as furnishing the only E. and W. valley through this region, while N. and S. valleys are numerous. The C.P.R.R. follows its valley for many miles. The river bottoms average a mile in width; outside of these the land is good, but needs irrigation. The Little Humboldt is its largest affluent. Some 5 m. above Humboldt Lake are the "Big Meadows," with an area of 5,000 acres, furnishing great quantities of hay and some peat. The sink is 3,920 ft. above the sea-level.

Huron Lake, one of the five great lakes of N. America, lies between Lake Superior on the N.W., Lake Michigan on the N.W. and W., and Lakes Erie and Ontario on the S. and S.E. Its shape is so irregular that it is difficult accurately to determine its exact dimensions. It lies between 43° 5' and 46° 15' N. lat., and between 79° 30' and 84° 50' W. lon. Its length from N. to S. is 260 m., and along the coast on the S.W. shore, it is 360 m. It is 160 m. in breadth from E. to W. in its widest part; but exclusive of the bay on the N.E., it is only 90, and its circumference 1,100 m. Its principal indentations are Saginaw Bay, extending into Michigan, and two others, one immediately N. of Manitou Islands, and the other S.E. of them. The latter called Georgian Bay, is abt. 170 m. long by 70 broad, in its greatest length and breadth, and is not far from one-fourth the size of the whole lake. Manitou (or Great Spirit) Islands, extend from a peninsula in its S.E. part, through its N. part, and with Drummond's Island separate another sheet of water from the main lake, 80 m. long and 20 broad. The boundary between the U. States and Canada, passes along the middle of the main Huron 225 m., and between Lesser Manitou and Drummond's Islands, by what is called the middle passage, and curves round to the N. and W. 25 m. to the entrance of St. Mary's R. The elevation of the surface of Lake Huron above the surface of the ocean is 596 ft.; or less than that of Lake Superior by 45 ft., or that of Lake Michigan by 4 ft. The greatest depth towards its W. shore, is at least, 1,000 ft., and its mean depth 900 ft., or abt. 300 ft. below the level of the Atlantic. The largest of the Manitou Islands, called Great Manitoulin, is 90 m. long and in its widest part, nearly 30 broad. The islands of Lake Huron are said to amount to 32,000. It receives the waters of Lake Superior by St. Mary's Strait or R., those of Lake Michigan by the Straits of Michilimackinac; and discharges its own waters by the river St. Clair. It receives the waters of Lake Nipissing on the N. by the river Francis and of Lake Simcoe on the E. by Severn R. Lake Huron is subject to violent storms, but its navigation is not usually dangerous. Though very deep it is generally shallow near the shores. It has some fine harbors, though there are no places of much importance on its borders.

Huron River, O., rises in Richland co., and flows through Huron and Erie cos., into Lake Erie at Huron. It is navigable, by a crooked channel 6 or 7 m. from its mouth, and has a canal along its borders to Milan. It affords good water-power.

Huron River, Mich., rises in Oakland co., and enters Lake Erie a few m. below the mouth of Detroit R. It is abt. 60 m. long and with its branches, affords extensive water-power.

Idaho (from the Indian E-dah-hoe, Gem on the Mountains), a N.W. territory, bounded N. by British Columbia, E. by Montana and Wyoming, S. by Utah and Nevada, and W. by Oregon and Washington. It is situated between lat. 42° and 49° N., lon. 111° and 117° 10' W., except that in the N.E. the Bitterroot range separates it from Montana and the Snake R. forms part of the W. boundary. The extreme length N. and S. on the W. boundary is 485 m. and along the Wyoming border 140 m., and the breadth varies from less than 50 m. on the N. to nearly 300 m. on the S.; area, 84,290; mean elevation, abt. 4,700 ft. The surface is very diversified; the N. portion is largely mountainous, with several fine broad valleys. In the S. portion a large area within the great bend of the Snake R. is occupied by an immense plain of basalt. South of the Snake the country is an alternation of broad valleys and narrow abrupt mountain ranges. The principal mountains are the Bitterroot and Salmon R. chains, with their spurs and subordinate ranges. They attain a height of from 8,000 to nearly 10,000 ft. The Snake R. plain lies S. of these mountains, extending E. and W. nearly across the territory. This is a field of basalt, seamed and crevassed, with little vegetation, and that consisting principally of Artemisia. The soil here is a shifting sand, and there is little surface water, as the streams sink and flow underneath. The principal river is the Snake, the south fork of the Columbia. It is a rapid stream with numerous falls, one of which, the Shoshone, rivals Niagara in volume and height of descent, which far surpasses the latter in magnificent picturesqueness of surrounding scenery. Several of the branches of the Snake, the Salmon, Clearwater, and Spokane, are large streams, but are not navigable, and are of value only for irrigation and mining purposes.—The climate, like that of other portions of the N.W., is characterized by great aridity of atmosphere and slight rainfall. In the S. the aridity is such that large areas are almost desert; but in the mountainous regions of the N. the rainfall is much greater, and agricultural operations can be carried on to some extent without irrigation. The N. part, being principally mountainous, is covered with forests of conifers, chiefly species of pine, spruce, fir, and tamarack. In the open valleys the vegetation consists mainly of the various kinds of grasses known collectively as "bunch grass." A rough estimate gives as the area covered by forest 40,000 sq. m., by useful grasses 25,000 sq. m., and by Artemisia 21,300 sq. m. The agricultural, grazing, and mining interests of Idaho are but commencing their development. In the valleys of the S. portion the Mormons are raising abundant crops of cereals, with the aid of irrigation. In the valleys of the lower Snake, the Boise, Clearwater, Salmon, and Spokane Rs., wheat, oats, rye, and other grains are cultivated to some extent. Large portions of the territory are well adapted for grazing, and this is now being turned to account. The principal prod. for the year 1880 were 274,750 lbs. of barley, 16,408 of corn, 462,236 of oats, and 540,589 of wheat.—The mineral wealth has not yet, owing to difficulty of transportation, been developed to any great extent; but it is known to be important. Gold and silver are found, the former both in vein and in placer deposits. From 1863 to 1880 the gold and silver deposited at the mints and assay offices were gold $24,157,447; silver 8727,282. The yield for the year 1881 was gold $1,700,000; silver $1,300,000. The principal vein deposits now being worked are in the Salmon R. and Owyhee Mts. Placers have been worked in nearly every co. of the territory, and have paid well. During the years 1880 and 1881, many new and rich deposits have been discovered in the Wood R. district, in the Salmon R. mountains, and there has been a considerable influx of mining population. Copper, iron, lead, coal, plumbago, and quick silver are also found. There are also mountains of sulphur, productive salt springs, quarries of the finest marble and building stones, large deposits of merchantable mica, and various varieties of semi-precious stones.—The administration of the territory is in the hands of a governor, secretary, and chief justice, all appointed by the President of the U. States, and a treasurer, comptroller, and superintendent of public instruction, who, as well as the members of the two houses of the legislature are elected by the people.—Idaho is divided into 13 cos., viz.: Ada, Alturas, Bear Lake, Boise, Cassia, Idaho, Kootenai, Lemhi, Nez Perce, Oneida, Owyhee, Shoshone, Washington. The principal settlements are Boise (the cap.), Buenavista, Idaho, Malade, and Silver City. The total number of Indians is abt. 6,000, consisting of the tribes Nez Perce, Bannock, Shoshone, Cœur d'Alene, Spokane, Pend'Ouille, and Kootenai. Most of them are settled on reservations. Idaho had in 1882, 265 m. of railroad in operation. The territory was established by act of Congress, March 3, 1863, from parts of Montana and Wyoming. Pop. in 1870, (exclusive of tribal Indians) 14,399; in 1880, 32,610 (of whom 21,818 males and 10,792 females, 22,630 natives and 9,974 of foreign birth; 29,013 whites, 53 colored, 3,379 Chinese, and 165 Indians).

Illinois, one of the central States, is bounded N. by Wis., E. by Lake Michigan and Ind., S. by the Ohio R., separating it from Ky., and W. by the Mississippi R., separating it from Mo. and Iowa. It is situated between lat. 36° 59' and 42° 30' N., and lon. 83° 35' and 91° 40' W.; area, 56,000 sq. m. The length from N. to S. is 378 m., the greatest breadth 210 m. Ill. is a great plain, with its highest section in the N., on Lake Michigan; thence it imperceptibly declines to the S.W., in which direction its principal rivers flow to the Mississippi. A small tract, in the N.W., which includes the lead mines, is hilly and broken, and there are bluffs along the Mississippi, some of which rise 300 to 400 ft. A ridge extends across the S. end of the State, constituting the fruit district of the region, called "Egypt," on account of its never failing fertility. On this ridge or swell of clay land are grown all the varieties of berries, grapes, plums, peaches, apples, and all kinds of vegetables in great profusion, which find prompt sale in Chicago and the northern cos., by reason of reaching market at early dates in the season. Excepting along the rivers, and where there has been extensive tree planting, the greater part of the State consists of a vast level or slightly undulating treeless prairies. To the eye the surface of Ill. is as level as that of an ocean in calm. The soil is of great fertility, and much of it seemingly inexhaustible. Over these prairies for hundreds of miles the plough never touches stone, pebble, or even sand. A luxuriant native grass formerly sustained herds of buffalo, and from the still unbroken prairie surface are annually mown thousands of tons of the wild grass for hay. All the cereals, roots, fruits, grasses, and vegetables of the temperate zone are grown in Ill., and some of the semi-tropical productions, as cotton and amber-cane.—The climate is marked by great extremes. The summers are very warm, the winters very cold. The summer heat is generally, however, tempered by fresh breezes, so that farm labor is not thereby interrupted. The mean temperature of the year in 40° lat. is abt. 54°, of the summer 77°, and of the winter 33½°. At Beloit the mean annual temperature is 47½°, and at Cairo, 58½°, thus showing a marked difference between the N. and S. extremities of the State. The climate is on the whole salubrious, except in the low and swampy bottom-lands, where chills and fever frequently prevail.—Coal is found in nearly all parts of the State; it is bituminous, a small proportion being cannel. The beds vary from 3½ to 8 ft. in thickness. The coal-measures are part of the general formation extending from beyond the Mississippi R. in Mo., across Ill. and parts of Ind. and O., and into Ky. It is estimated that three-fourths of the surface area of the State are underlain by beds of coal. The coal mined in the State during 1880 was 6,089,514 tons. Near Galena, in the N.W. part of the State, are lead mines which have been worked for half a century, and which at one time made Galena the most prosperous city in the State. Salt springs are found in the S.E. cos. Stone suitable for building is found in various parts of the State. An inexhaustible field of limestone, called "Lemont marble," is found near Chicago, and has been largely used in rebuilding that city.—In 1880 there were 26,174,566 acres of improved, and 8,204,503 of unimproved lands. The improved lands were under cultivation in 1880 as follows: wheat, 2,702,380 acres, Indian corn, 7,592,152, oats, 1,703,843, meadows, 2,267,945, other field products, 567,890, inclosed pasture, 4,242,713, orchards, 293,593, woodland, 3,708,567. The great crops of Ill. are corn, wheat, oats and hay, and much attention is also given to the raising of live stock. The agricultural returns for 1880 were as follows :

Products.	Quantity produced.	Average yield per acre.	Number of acres.	Total Valuation.
Indian corn bushels.	240,452,896	27.2	8,840,180	$86,563,043

The live stock had a value of $141,501,394, and comprised 1,067,220 horses, 124,527 mules, 709,308 milch cows, oxen and other cattle, 1,222,947, 1,155,232 sheep, and 3,202 swine.—The statistics of manuf. for 1882 gave as results 14,549 establishments, employing 144,727 operatives, capital invested, $140,652,066, wages paid during the year, $57,429,085, value of materials, $289,843,907, value of products, $414,864,673. The abundance of coal, the proximity to the Lake Superior iron and copper mines, the unlimited means of transportation, the supply of lumber, the cheapness of food, the superior water-power in various parts of the State, have all tended to make Ill. a large and convenient seat of manuf. Its iron and steel establishments rank with the largest in the country. Ill. ranks fourth in the Union as a manuf. State.—The State is now admirably supplied with railroads, their extent reaching 8,325 m. in 1882. They cross every co. in the State, indeed, they are so numerous and so interlaced that there are few, if any, localities more than 10 m. from a railroad, while a large proportion of the shipping points have the benefit of more than one route by which to ship and receive merchandise. In addition to the railroad traffic, there is much business done by steamboats at Cairo, East St. Louis, Alton, Quincy, Rock Island, and other points on the Ohio and Mississippi Rs., though transportation by river has declined much of late years. The Illinois and Michigan Canal is 93 m. long, and connects Lake Michigan at Chicago with the Illinois R., at the head of navigation of that river. This canal has cost $17,000,000, but is now too small for the service needed. The State has expended much money improving the navigation of the Illinois by locks and dams, and this improvement when completed, with the enlargement of the canal to the capacity of steamboat navigation, will be one of the most extensive works of interior water communication in the world, being over 400 m. long, and connecting the waters of the Atlantic, through the St. Lawrence R. and the lakes, and through the Mississippi R., with the Gulf of Mexico. The other rivers are the Kankakee, Des Plaines, Rock, Kaskaskia, Embarras, Little Wabash, Big Muddy, and Chicago.—The public school system is liberally supported. The permanent school fund yields abt. $60,000, to which the State adds $1,000,000 annually, and this is distributed among the counties. In addition each school district levies such taxes as may be needed for its schools, and may borrow money to build school-houses. In 1880 the receipts of revenue for schools amounted to $6,142,340, the expenditure to $6,190,743. The number of children of the school age (6 to 21 years) was 1,000,694, of these 693,334 were enrolled as attending the public schools, and 47,695 as attending private and parochial schools. The whole number of school districts in the State was 11,874; male teachers, 8,973, female teachers, 12,737. The State has established two normal universities, at Normal, McLean co., and at Carbondale, Jackson co. There is an industrial university at Champaign, maintained and liberally endowed by the State. There are also several other universities and colleges, including medical and theological, in various parts of the State. The State maintains 4 hospitals for the insane, at Jacksonville, Elgin, Anna, and Kankakee; an institution for educating the blind, and one for educating the deaf and dumb, both at Jacksonville, an asylum for imbecile children, an eye and ear infirmary, a home for soldiers' orphans, and a correctional or reformatory school for boys. The annual expenditure for the maintenance of these charities is abt. $1,000,000.—The State is divided into 102 cos., viz.: Adams, Alexander, Bond, Boone, Brown, Bureau, Calhoun, Carroll, Cass, Champaign, Christian, Clark, Clay, Clinton, Coles, Cook, Crawford, Cumberland, De Kalb, De Witt, Douglas, Du Page, Edgar, Edwards, Effingham, Fayette, Ford, Franklin, Fulton, Gallatin, Greene, Grundy, Hamilton, Hancock, Hardin, Henderson, Henry, Iroquois, Jackson, Jasper, Jefferson, Jersey, Jo Daviess, Johnson, Kane, Kankakee, Kendall, Knox, Lake, La Salle, Lawrence, Lee, Livingston, Logan, McDonough, McHenry, McLean, Macon, Macopin, Madison, Marion, Marshall, Mason, Massac, Menard, Mercer, Monroe, Montgomery, Morgan, Moultrie, Ogle, Peoria, Perry, Piatt, Pike, Pope, Pulaski, Putnam, Randolph, Richland, Rock Island, St. Clair, Saline, Sangamon, Schuyler, Scott, Shelby, Stark, Stephenson, Tazewell, Union, Vermillion, Wabash, Warren, Washington, Wayne, White, Whitesides, Will, Williamson, Winnebago, Woodford. The following cities had a pop. exceeding 10,000: Chicago, 503,304, Peoria, 20,315, Quincy, 27,275, Springfield (the cap.), 19,746, Bloomington, 17,184, Joliet, 16,145, Rockford, 13,136, Aurora, 11,825, Rock Island, 11,660, Galesbury, 11,446, Jacksonville, 10,927; Belleville, 10,682, East St. Louis, 10,054; and Freeport, 10,016. The legislative power is vested in a senate of 51 members and a house of representatives of 153 members. The sessions are biennial. The governor and other executive officers are elected for 4 years. There is an elective judiciary. The supreme court consists of seven judges, chosen for a term of 9 years. The circuit judges are elected for a term of 6 years. There is a county court for each co.—The State is free from all debts. Taxation is imposed by a rate levied on all real and personal property, according to a previous valuation, made by local assessors, revised by county boards, and again revised and equalized by a State board. The total assessment or valuation of the property in the State for taxation averages not more than one-fourth of the value at which the property can be sold. The constitution limits the rate of taxation (except to pay debts) by cos., to 75 cents on each $100 of the official valuation. The same valuation governs all taxation, the maximum rate being fixed by law. The valuation of all the property in the State for taxable purposes for the year 1880 was $783,616,394.—Father Marquette, a French Jesuit, visited the Illinois Indians in 1673. Mission stations were established at Kaskaska and Peoria in 1673. All the French possessions E. of the Mississippi R., were ceded to Great Britain in 1763, and Ill. then became a possession of the colony of Va. In 1809 it was erected into a Territory; and in Dec., 1818, was admitted into the Union as a State. On its admission to the Union a constitution providing a form of government was adopted: in 1848 this was superseded by another, and this again was set aside in 1870 by the third and present constitution. Pop. 1810, 12,282; in 1830, 157,445; in 1840, 476,183; in 1850, 851,470; in 1860, 1,711,951; in 1870, 2,539,871; in 1880, 3,077,871 (of whom 1,586,523 males and 1,491,348 females; 2,494,295 natives and 583,276 of foreign birth; 3,031,151 whites, 46,368 colored, 212 Chinese and 140 Indians).

Illinois River, the largest river in the State to which it gives its name. It is formed in Grundy co., in the N.E. part of the State, abt. 45 m. S.W. Lake Michigan, by the union of Kankakee and Des Plaines Rs. It flows nearly W. to Hennepin, in Putnam co., and thence S.W., and finally S., until it unites with the Mississippi between Calhoun and Jersey cos., 20 m. above the mouth of the Missouri. It is abt. 500 m. long, and is navigable at high water for 245 m. It is deep and broad, in several places expanding into basins which might almost be called lakes. Peoria, the most important city on its banks, is built on the shore of one of these basins. Its principal affluents are the Fox, Spoon, Crooked Creek, the Mackinaw, Sangamon, and Vermilion. Above the mouth of the Vermilion, in La Salle co., it is obstructed by rapids, and a canal has been built from this point to Chicago, a distance of 96 m., which affords uninterrupted water communication between the lakes and the Mississippi. The Illinois was ascended by Marquette in 1673, and in 1682 La Salle navigated the whole course of the river.

Indiana, one of the central States, is bounded N. by Lake Michigan and the State of Mich. (the boundary line being 10 m. N. of the S. extreme of the lake), E. by Ohio, S. by the Ohio R., which separates it from Ky., W. by the Wabash R., and then by a due N. line from the town of Vincennes, separating it from Ill. It is situated bet. lat. 37° 47' and 41° 46' N. and lon. 84° 49' and 88° 2' W. The State is in the form of a parallelogram, 276 m. long and 140 m.

wide; area, 35,910 sq. m. Most of the State is level or gently rolling, except along the Ohio, where the plain has been deeply grooved by the attiluent streams into hills and valleys. There are no elevations that could properly be termed mountains. From careful surveys, the mean altitude of the State is estimated at 735 feet above sea-level. It is well watered by numerous streams and rivers, but, with the exception of the Ohio and Wabash, few of them are navigable. The Wabash is the largest river which has its course mainly within the State; and, together with its branches, it drains three-fourths of the entire surface. The Ohio forms the entire S. boundary of the State. The other principal rivers of Ind. are the White (the principal tributary of the Wabash), the Maumee, and the upper St. Joseph.—A part of the great coal-field of Ill. extends into Ind., covering an area of over 7,000 sq. m. in the W. and S.W. parts, furnishing 7 workable seams, at a depth of 50 to 220 ft., and averaging 80 ft. below the surface; the quality is from fair to good; an area of 600 sq. m. in this field yields a superior "block" of splint coal, which is used in blast furnaces as it comes from the mine, without coking, and is well adapted for the preparation of Bessemer steel. The quantity of coal mined in 1880 was 1,449,496 tons, valued at $2,143,093. Near Leavenworth, in the S. part of the State, there is a remarkable calcareous cavern, the Wyandotte Cave. One of its chambers is 350 feet long and 245 in height. It abounds with stalactites and stalagmites of great variety and size. Inexhaustible beds of excellent limestone, fire clay, potter's clay, kaolin, and lime, as well as paving and building stone, are found in the S.E. parts of the State.—Along all the rivers, except the Ohio, there are rich alluvial deposits from 2 to 4 ft. deep. Large crops of corn have been produced for 50 years in succession. Portions of the Ohio Valley are hilly and sterile, but Ind. has an unusually small percentage of waste land. The climate is somewhat milder than that of the same latitudes on the Atlantic coast. The winters are often very cold but of short duration, and heavy snows rarely cover the ground. The summers are hot, and on the whole salubrious. The difference in temperature between the N. and S. portions of the State is considerable. At Logansport the mean annual temperature is nearly 53°; the maximum on the warmest day 102°, and the minimum on the coldest—10°.—Agriculture is the chief branch of industry, the climate and soil being suited to the growth of cereals, fruits, and grasses. The principal products for the year 1880 are shown in the following table:

Products.	Quantity Produced.	Average Yield per Acre.	Number of Acres.	Total Valuation.

Other leading articles of production were sorghum molasses, 939,020 galls., maple molasses, 203,134 galls. (and 475,628 in 1881); cider, 6,093,233 galls., wine, 65,456 galls.; vinegar, 668,453 galls.; apples, 6,986,698 bbls. (and 3,203,259 in 1881); peaches, 668,588 bbls. in 1880 (and 18,699 in 1881); grapes, 4,029,224 lbs. (and 2,199,009 in 1881); honey, 1,097,636 lbs. (and 630,141 in 1881); butter, 29,603,647 lbs.; cheese, 833,110 lbs.; milk, 122,157,633 galls.; wool, 4,836,648 lbs. The same year (1880) the domestic animals numbered—horses, 702,576, mules, 54,664, milch cows, 439,148, oxen and other cattle, 764,166, sheep, 1,029,570, and 2,186,000 swine; total value, $81,437,549.—The growth of manuf. interests have been very marked during the last decade. In 1880 there were in Ind. 11,198 manuf. establishments, employing 69,508 hands, capital invested, $63,748,962, wages paid during the year, $21,960,888, value of materials, $100,262,917; value of products, $148,006,411. A few of the leading industries were lumber, flour, woolen goods, agricultural implements, iron, machinery, furniture, cars (freight and passenger), and boots and shoes.—Ind. is interlaced with a complete network of railroads, traversing nearly every county. In 1882 there were 56 lines (or branches) of railroads, having in the States 4,764 m. of road in operation. There are 2 canals in the State. The Wabash and Erie, from Evansville to Toledo, a part of the way by slack water navigation of the Wabash and Maumee, is 467 m. in length, 379 of which are in Ind. It is now unused beyond Lafayette. The White Water Canal is 75 m. in length, from Lawrenceburg on the Ohio to Hagerstown. It is of more service than the other.—A general system of free instruction extends from the primary school to the State university, under the direction of a State superintendent and a State board of education. The school fund amounts to $8,936,022. In 1880 the number of school-houses was 9,380 (411 built during the year); youth of schoolage, 708,801; enrolled in public schools, 503,892; average daily attendance, 312,143; male and female teachers in public schools, 13,590. The State university at Bloomington is open to pupils of both sexes. It has departments of law, medicine, military science and civil engineering, in addition to the regular collegiate course. Purdue university received the landscript granted by congress for an agricultural college. This fund amounts to $340,000, and the entire property of the institution is valued at $510,000. Ind. has 6 universities so named, 16 colleges, 1 school of theology, 3 schools of law, 2 medical and 2 normal schools. There are 2 state prisons, the northern at Michigan City the southern at Jeffersonville, each having accommodations for about 400 prisoners. The State institute for the blind, the asylum for the insane, the institute for the deaf and dumb, and the reformatory institution for women and girls are at Indianapolis. There is also a soldiers' home at Knightsville and a house of refuge at Plainfield. All the above institutions are supported by the State.—The State is divided into 92 cos., viz.: Adams, Allen, Bartholomew, Benton, Blackford, Boone, Brown, Carroll, Cass, Clarke, Clay, Clinton, Crawford, Daviess, Dearborn, Decatur, De Kalb, Delaware, Dubois, Elkhart, Fayette, Floyd, Fountain, Franklin, Fulton, Gibson, Grant, Greene, Hamilton, Hancock, Harrison, Hendricks, Henry, Howard, Huntington, Jackson, Jasper, Jay, Jefferson, Jennings, Johnson, Knox, Kosciusko, La Grange, Lake, Laporte, Lawrence, Madison, Marion, Marshall, Martin, Miami, Monroe, Montgomery, Morgan, Newton, Noble, Ohio, Orange, Owen, Parke, Perry, Pike, Porter, Posey, Pulaski, Putnam, Randolph, Ripley, Rush, Scott, Shelby, Spencer, Starke, Steuben, St. Joseph, Sullivan, Switzerland, Tippecanoe, Tipton, Union, Vanderburgh, Vermilion, Vigo, Wabash, Warren, Warwick, Washington, Wayne, Wells, White, Whitley. Indianapolis is the cap. and the commercial metropolis. The other cities are Fort Wayne, Logansport, Jeffersonville, Lawrenceburg, Goshen, Connersville, New Albany, Seymour, Madison, Franklin City, Vincennes, La

Porte, Peru, Crawfordville, Kendallville, Valparaiso, Shelbyville, Greencastle, South Bend, La Fayette, Evansville, Terre Haute, Wabash City, Richmond, Columbia.—The constitution of Ind. is dated Feb. 10, 1851. The general assembly consists of a senate of 50 members elected for 4 years, and a house of representatives of 100 members elected for 2 years. The legislative sessions are biennial. The governor (salary $8,000), is elected for 4 years. The State election is held on the second Tuesday of October in even years. The judicial power is vested in a supreme, a circuit, and a superior court. Ind. sends 13 representatives to the national congress, and has therefore 15 electoral votes. The State debt, on October 30, 1882, amounted to $4,876,608. The receipts into the State treasury during the preceding year were $3,808,491.23, and the disbursements $3,110,421.70. The total valuation of real and personal property, in 1881, was $805,202,792.—The Ind. territory, which was originally the property of the Miami confederacy of Indiana, was claimed by France on account of La Salle's discovery of the Mississippi, in 1682. As early as 1702 a mission was established at Vincennes. In 1763 the territory was ceded to the British. The early settlers suffered greatly from the Indians. Gen. Harrison broke the power of the savages by defeating Tecumseh at the battle of Tippecanoe, Nov. 7, 1811. The State was admitted into the Union Dec. 11, 1816. In 1881 the legislature passed a law prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors. Pop. in 1800, 5,641; in 1820, 147,178; in 1840, 685,866; in 1860, 1,350,428; in 1870, 1,680,637; in 1880, 1,978,301 (of whom 1,010,361 males and 967,940 females, 1,834,123 natives and 144,178 of foreign birth, 1,938,798 whites, 39,228 colored, 29 Chinese, and 246 Indians).

Indiana, Pa., a W. central co., bounded S.W. by Conemaugh R. and drained by numerous small streams; area, 770 sq. m. It has a hilly surface, well timbered chiefly with pine, and abounds in iron ore and bituminous coal. The soil is moderately fertile. The chief prod. in 1880 were 309,752 bush. of wheat, 914,635 of corn, 775,383 of oats, 77,166 of rye, and 109,139 of buckwheat; also wool, butter and live-stock. Cap., Indiana. Val. of taxable prop. abt. $37,000,000. Pop. 40,558 (of whom 1,152 for., and 222 colored).

Indianapolis, Ind., cap. of the State and of Marion co., is situated at the confluence of Fall Creek and White R., 824 m. W. of New York by rail, and 194 m. S.E. Chicago. The streets and avenues are 90 feet wide except Washington, the main street, which is 120. The city now extends 4 m. in length and 3 in width. It is built upon a level plain and surrounded by a fertile country. In 1817 the first railway entered the city. Within a few years thereafter other lines were constructed, until now 15 main lines converge in the Union depot. About 100 passenger trains, connected with every part of the country, enter and depart daily. The numerous tracts being on a level with the surface of the streets, the obstruction and danger at the numerous crossings became very great on account of the increase of railway traffic, so that in 1877 a loop line, called the "Bell," had to be made passing round the city, to connect the various railroads. By means of it the "through freight cars" are conveyed past the city without blocking the traffic. Indianapolis is in the centre of the swine-producing region, and pork packing is one of the chief industries of the city. The number packed in 1880 was 677,809. It is also largely engaged in the grain trade. The railroads have been of greatest service to Indianapolis, compensating for its want of water transit. The manuf. and mercantile interests, which are large and increasing, are the natural result of the city's extensive railroad connections. A system of graded free schools is maintained all the year. The city school property is valued at $1,041,000. In 1871 a public library was established, and is supported by taxation, which now contains 36,461 volumes, and is rapidly increasing. The masonic temple, odd-fellows hall, post-office, U.S. arsenal, and chamber of commerce are handsome buildings. The Marion county court-house, standing on a public square in the heart of the city, was completed in 1877 at a cost of $1,411,524. The exterior is of Indiana limestone, the interior of iron and marble, with frescoed walls and ceilings. Its dimensions are 150 by 286 ft., and 240 ft. to the top of the dome. The principal benevolent institutions of the State, viz., the institution for the education of the blind, that for the deaf and dumb, and the hospital for the insane are located here; they are handsome and commodious buildings, the last having accommodation for 1,313 patients. The State reformatory for women and girls, where all female offenders are imprisoned, adjoins the city. The institution is under the management of a board of control, composed of women chosen by the governor of the State. In 1877 the State began the erection of a new State house, to be completed in 1888, at a cost of $2,000,000. This will be one of the most imposing capital buildings in the United States. The assessed value of property in 1880 was $50,254,934. Indianapolis had its name given by act of the Legislature on Jan. 6, 1821, it was incorporated in 1836, and received a city charter in 1847. Pop. in 1850, 8,090; 1860, 18,113; in 1870, 48,244; in 1880, 75,074.

It is the terminus of G., W.T. & P.R.R. (completed to Cuero, 66 m.) Its harbor is large and commodious; it has steamers thrice a week from New Orleans, and two lines of sailing vessels ply regularly to New York, and there are many other domestic ports with which it has a trade. About ten vessels bring lumber from Florida and Louisiana. Cattle, wool, hides, cotton, &c. are extensively shipped from this point. The town has a bank, and several large importing and wholesale establishments. On Sept. 15, 1875, a severe storm, lasting five days, visited the coast from Galveston to Indianola, causing the waters to rise and flood the more exposed places, sweeping away several small villages, with great loss of life. Indianola was submerged, and except the larger business houses was entirely swept away. Pop. in 1870, 2,106; in 1880, 931.

Indian Territory. a southern central tract of land, which, by act of congress passed June 4, 1834, has been set apart as a permanent residence for the Indian tribes which have been or may be removed from the States or Territories of the Union. It is bounded N. by Colorado and Kansas, E. by Missouri and Arkansas, S. by Texas, and W. by Texas and New Mexico. It is situated between lat. 33° 35' and 37° N. and lon. 94° 20' and 103° W. The greatest length from E. to W. is 465 m., the greatest breadth 285 m. Estimated area, 69,000 sq. m. The E. portion is fertile and well watered, having an annual rainfall of 40 to 50 inches, and a mean annual temperature of about 60°. The surface is mainly rolling prairie, with broad stretches of rich land along the streams, and an abundance of timber. This section is separated from the W. part, which presents a different aspect, by a broad belt of forest, known as the "Cross Timbers," which extends nearly across the Territory in a N. and S. direction. Its breadth ranges from 40 to 60 m. West of this singular strip of forest the country assumes the appearance of the "Great Plains,"—that long in-line which stretches eastward from the base of the Rocky Mountains. The surface is a monotonous, rolling, treeless expanse. The valleys are shallow, and the dividing ridges are broad and slightly marked. The climate is comparatively dry, the average annual rainfall being but 20 to 25 inches; and irrigation is needed for the successful cultivation of most crops. Timber is found only in the river valleys, on the faces of bluffs and among the hills. The generally level surface of prairies and plains is broken in the S. and S. E. parts of the Territory by ranges and groups of hills, which rise from a few hundred to 1,500 ft. above the surrounding country. These hills, known as the San Bois Hills, Shawnee Hills, Wichita Mountains, etc., form a part of the Ozark Mountains. The principal rivers are the Arkansas with its branches, the Neosho, the Salt and Red Forks, and the Canadian, with its North Fork, and, in the S. part of the Territory, the Red R., which forms the boundary with Texas, and its branch, the Washita. All these are of little or no importance as regards navigation. The E. part of the Territory is well watered, but the W. part, except at times of flood, in late spring and early summer, has few flowing streams.—The Territory contains many reservations, or defined portions of land set apart and occupied by single tribes, or by several tribes gathered into one. At each of these reservations is an agent, appointed by the president and confirmed by the senate, who represents the U. States in a general supervision of the interests of the several tribes. The report of the commissioner of Indian affairs for the year 1880 shows the existence of eight agencies in the Territory. These are: Choyenne and Arapaho agency, including the tribes bearing these names; pop. 5,496, engaged in agriculture 527, children in school 208. Kiowa, Comanche and Wichita agency, including the Kiowa, Comanche, Wichita, Apache, Waco, Towaconie, Keechie, Caddo and Delaware tribes; pop. 4,117, engaged in agriculture 750, children in school 229. Osage agency, including the Osage, Kaw and Quapaw tribes; pop. 2,645, engaged in agriculture 600, children in school 220. The Pawnee agency; pop. 1,440, engaged in agriculture 200, children in school 200. The Ponca agency, including the Ponca (in part) and Nez Percé tribes; pop. 900, engaged in agriculture 50, children in school 75. The Quapaw agency, including the Seneca, Shawnee, Wyandott, confederated Peoria and Miami, Quapaw, Ottawa, Modoc, Stray Black Bob and Pottawatomie; pop. 1,111, engaged in agriculture 126, children in school 213. The Sac and Fox agency, including the Absentee Shawnee, Sac and Fox of the Mississippi, Mexican Kickapoo, Citizen Pottawatomie, Mokokoko band of Sac and Fox tribes; pop. 1,933, engaged in agriculture 1,029, children in school 125. The Union agency, including the Cherokee, Choctaw, Creek, Chickasaw and Seminole tribes, known as civilized Indians; pop. 60,560. All these five tribes wear citizens' dress, as do some in all the other reservations.—The tribes included in the eight agencies have in their reservations 31,105,920 acres of land, of which 10,246,405 are suitable for cultivation, leaving unoccupied and unappropriated within the limits of different treaty reservations 9,991,169 acres. The five civilized tribes had under cultivation in 1880 273,000 acres. They raised 565,400 bush. of wheat, 2,015,000 of corn, 200,500 of oats and barley, 336,700 of vegetables, cut 176,500 tons of hay. They owned 45,500 horses, 5,500 mules, 272,000 cattle, 190,000 swine, 32,400 sheep, and raised 10,550 bales of cotton. The other tribes in this territory had under cultivation 16,931 acres; raised 5,840 bush. of wheat, 90,774 of corn, and 10,441 of vegetables. They owned 19,092 horses and 12,684 cattle.—Experience shows that Indian children are as bright and teachable as average white children of the same age; and while the progress in the work of civilizing aboriginal Indians without any educational advantage is a slow process, the progress of youth trained in the schools is of the most hopeful character. Of the children in these five tribes, 6,250 males were in school in 1880, females not reported. Amount of tribal funds expended for their education, $156,356 during the year. The total pop. of the eight agencies in 1880 was 78,202.

Iowa, one of the N.W. States, bounded N. by Minn., E. by the Mississippi R., separating it from Wis. and Ill., S. by Mo., and W. by the Missouri R., separating it from Neb. and Dak. It is situated between lat. 40° 20' and 43° 30' N., and lon. 90° 12' and 96° 38' W. General extent, 208 m. from E. to W., and 300 m.

from N. to S.; area, 55,475 sq. m. The whole State is remarkably level and contains no mountains. Starting from the Mississippi R., the ground gradually rises toward the watershed between the two great river systems of the Mississippi and Missouri, where the elevation is 967 feet above the level of the Mississippi. The latter river is 444 feet above the sea-level at the mouth of the Des Moines, and the Missouri at Council Bluffs is 1,023 feet above the sea. The highest land in the State, at Spirit Lake, near the Minnesota line, has an elevation of 1,624 feet. The N. E. section is broken and irregular, and the channels of the rivers are cut deep in the rocks. Bluffs from 300 to 400 feet high extend along the Iowa R. Isolated "mounds" in the lead region attain a height of nearly 500 feet. The bottom lands along the rivers are heavily timbered with elm, black-walnut, white and burr oak, poplar, ash, maple, hickory, locust, sycamore, linden, cottonwood, etc. About 3,552,880 acres are in timber, giving one acre of woodland to ten acres of prairie. Trees grow with great rapidity when planted on the prairies, and there is said to be more wood in the State now than when it was first settled. The Mississippi R. winds along the E. border for 450 m., and the Missouri along the W. border for two-thirds the breadth of the State. The principal river flowing within the State is the Des Moines, which rises in a group of lakes near the border of Minnesota and runs in a S. E. direction for 450 m., forming the S. boundary of Iowa for 25 m. It is navigable for about half its length. The Iowa R., 300 m. long, is navigable for 80 m. Its main branch is the Cedar R. There are many beautiful lakes in the N. counties.—It is estimated that about 7,000 sq. m. are underlaid by the coal-measures. Within this area coal beds of workable thickness and quality have been found at Fort Dodge, Moingona, Des Moines and Oskaloosa, where they are being extensively worked, the product for 1880 being 1,442,333 tons, valued at $2,273,155. The coal is bituminous, no anthracite having been found in the State. The N. E. part of Iowa is included within the great lead region of the Upper Mississippi, and, although the palmy days of the mines of that region are over, the product is yet very important.—The climate resembles in its essential features that of the rest of the prairie States, excepting that towards the W. the aridity of the atmosphere and the decreased rainfall characteristic of the great plains begin to be perceptible. The annual rainfall ranges from 24 to 44 inches, with an average of about 36 inches. The mean annual temperature ranges from 42° to 52°, the summer mean from 66° to 79°, and the winter mean from 14° to 27°, showing a difference between the summer and winter temperatures of 52°. The highest single observed temperatures have been 95° to 105°, and the lowest 18° to 33° below zero, S. E. portion has the mildest and most equable temperature, as well as the greatest rainfall. Northward and westward the temperature becomes lower and extremes greater.—The soil is extremely fertile, whether drift, bluff or alluvial. The drift, whose name explains its origin, covers the greater part of the State. It is a dark loam, one to two feet in depth, and of almost inexhaustible fertility. The bluff soil or loess occupies the country bordering upon the valley of the Missouri. It is supposed to be a subaerial deposit, brought by the prevalent westerly winds from the plains of Nebraska and Dakota, and deposited here near the borders of the humid region. It has a great depth, reaching 200 feet in some instances, and is everywhere extremely rich.—The alluvial soil, found in the valleys and bottom lands, is the deposit of the streams, and varies in composition with the country which the streams have traversed above. Much of it on the Missouri and its branches is composed of loess, while that on the Mississippi is mainly altered drift deposits. The agricultural interest is by far the largest and most important of the State. In the production of corn and barley it ranks first, and of wheat fifth, among the States of the Union. The principal products for the year 1880 were as follows:

Products.	Quantity Produced.	Average Yield per Acre.	Number of Acres in Each Crop.	Value.

Stock raising is an important, lucrative and growing business. The fertile prairies, covered with the most nutritious grasses and watered with clear and never-failing streams, afford a range of pasturage unsurpassed in excellence or extent. The number of farm animals in 1880 were: 809,536 horses, 45,594 mules, 782,460 milch cows, 1,411,512 oxen and other cattle, 463,488 sheep, and 2,778,400 hogs—total value $123,316,670. The average value of cleared farming land in the State in 1880 was $27.30 per acre; of timber land, $39.36. The increased value of the latter is due to the scarcity of forests. The average monthly wages paid to agricultural laborers during the same year was $23.26; average daily wages on transient employment, $2.01.—In 1880 there were 6,921 manufacturing establishments, employing 28,372 hands; capital invested, $43,987,886; wages paid during the year, $9,725,962; value of materials, $48,702,311; value of products, $71,045,926. The principal industries were agricultural implements, brick and tile, flour and grist mill products, lumber, butter and cheese in factories, slaughtering and packing.—For means of communication and transportation Iowa is dependent almost entirely upon its railroads and its two bounding rivers. It has no canals, if we except the short one around the Des Moines rapids. In 1880 there were 45 railroads, working 4,779 miles of track, with a total capital stock of $60,000,000, and a funded debt of $44,400,000. The total amount invested in railroads exceeded $100,000,000. The total gross earnings of the companies from passengers, freight and mails were, $5,218,000, of which $1,415,000, or 27 per cent., were net earnings. This is but 23-10 per cent. on the capital stock.—Iowa, in her educational system, ranks as one of the best in the Union. She has a permanent school fund yielding an annual income of 8 per cent., which is applied to the education of her youth. In addition, district and county school taxes are levied. The State supports one university, located at Iowa City, and a school of agriculture and the mechanical arts, located near Ames, in Story co., for both sexes. The State university comprises academic, normal, medical and law departments. The annual expenditures for public-school purposes is upwards of $5,000,000. The number of teachers employed in 1880 was 21,598, school children 586,556. There are 11,037 school-houses, valued at $9,227,743. The various religious denominations have also established colleges and schools of the higher grades. Among them in 1880 were :

Iowa is divided into 99 cos., viz.: Adair, Adams, Allamakee, Appanoose, Audubon, Benton, Black Hawk, Boone, Bremer, Buchanan, Buena Vista, Butler, Calhoun, Carroll, Cass, Cedar, Cerro Gordo, Cherokee, Chickasaw, Clarke, Clay, Clayton, Clinton, Crawford, Dallas, Davis, Decatur, Delaware, Des Moines, Dickinson, Dubuque, Emmet, Fayette, Floyd, Franklin, Fremont, Greene, Grundy, Guthrie, Hamilton, Hancock, Hardin, Harrison, Henry, Howard, Humboldt, Ida, Iowa, Jackson, Jasper, Jefferson, Johnson, Jones, Keokuk, Kossuth, Lee, Linn, Louisa, Lucas, Lyon, Madison, Mahaska, Marion, Marshall, Mills, Mitchell, Monona, Monroe, Montgomery, Muscatine, O'Brien, Osceola, Page, Palo Alto, Plymouth, Pocahontas, Polk, Pottawattamie, Poweshiek, Ringgold, Sac, Scott, Shelby, Sioux, Story, Tama, Taylor, Union, Van Buren, Wapello, Warren, Washington, Wayne, Webster, Winnebago, Winneshiek, Woodbury, Worth, Wright. The principal cities are Des Moines (the cap.), Dubuque, Davenport, Burlington, Council Bluffs, Keokuk, Cedar Rapids, Clinton, Ottumwa and Muscatine.—The legislative authority is vested in a senate of 50 members, elected for four years, and a house of representatives of 100 members, elected for two years. There are biennial sessions. The governor (salary $3,000) and most of the State officers are chosen for two years. The supreme court consists of four judges (salary $4,000), chosen by popular election for a term of six years. Iowa sends 11 representatives to the national congress, and has 13 electoral votes.—The total bonded debt of the State in 1882 was $372,935. The receipts into the State treasury during the year 1881 amounted to $2,514,262, and the disbursements to $2,409,897. The total valuation of taxable property in 1880 was $397,522,764 (real estate, $296,254,342, personal property $101,268,422).—Until 1883 there were no white men but Indian traders and hunters residing within the limits of the great State which 47 years later contained over 1,600,000 souls. This section was first a part of Michigan, and then of Wisconsin territory. The separate territory of Iowa was organized June 12, 1838. Iowa was admitted into the Union, as the 29th State, Dec. 28, 1846. The present constitution was ratified August 3, 1857. Capital punishment was abolished in 1872.—Pop. in 1840, 43,112; in 1850, 192,214; in 1860, 674,913; in 1870, 1,194,020; in 1880, 1,624,615 (of whom 848,136 males, and 776,479 females; 2,362,966 natives, and 261,650 of foreign birth; 1,614,600 whites, 9,516 color'd, 23 Chinese and 466 Indians).—A river of the above State, rises in Hancock co., in

James River (Indian name POWHATAN), Va., one of the noblest of American rivers, is formed near the W. border of the State, on the border of Alleghany and Botetourt cos., by the union of Jackson and Cowpasture Rs., thence flows S.E. and E. to the Blue Ridge, at the foot of which it receives Calf-pasture R. on the left. Breaking through the Blue Ridge abt. 15 m. N.E. the Peaks of Otter, it resumes its S.E. course to Lynchburg, near which town it bends sharply to the N.E. On reaching the boundary between Albemarle and Buckingham cos., it takes an E.S.E. direction, which it retains with little variation until it reaches Richmond, where it turns nearly S. It is here obstructed by rapids, and embraces a number of small islands. Near the S.E. extremity of Henrico co. it again takes a S.E. course, after some tortuous deviations, and finally flows into the S. part of Chesapeake Bay, through a broad estuary, at the mouth of which are Hampton Roads. Willoughby Point and Old Point Comfort are on either side of its embouchure. The river is 450 m. long, and navigable by vessels of 130 tons to Richmond, at the head of tide water, 150 m. from the sea, whence the James R. and Kanawha Canal, completed to Buchanan in Botetourt co., passes along its upper course. The principal tributaries of James R. are the Appomattox on the right and the Chickahominy on the left. The most important towns on its bank are Richmond and Lynchburg.

Jersey City, N. J., cap. of Hudson co., on the right or W. bank of the Hudson R., at its entrance in New York Bay, and opposite the S. portion of New York, with which it is connected by 5 ferries. It is laid out irregularly, owing to its being an aggregation of three formerly distinct municipalities. Many of the streets are broad and well paved, and the city is provided with efficient gas, water, and sewerage systems. It has few striking buildings, the most prominent structures being the immense grain elevators near the river, 3 hospitals, an orphan's home, and the public school buildings, 21 in number. The public schools are supported by State and city taxes, and administered by a board of education. The trade of the city is very considerable; but, as it is embraced in the New York customs district, separate returns are not made. The fact that it is a terminus for 3 lines of ocean steamers, 5 trunk lines of railroads, 7 lesser railroads, and the Morris Canal, greatly facilitates the transport of coal, iron, &c., and materially fosters its industries. Jersey City has iron foundries, iron, steel, and zinc works, boiler yards, machine shops, railway plant manuf., tobacco factories, breweries, and other establishments which turn out watches, glass, crucibles, sugar, soap, candles, and a large variety of hardware and other articles. The extensive abattoirs at Long Dock are noteworthy for their excellent management. The "City of Jersey" was incorporated in 1829; but in 1851 it received another charter, under its present name. Its very rapid growth has been largely owing to its absorption of the tps. and cities of Van Voorst in 1851, Hudson and Bergen in 1870, and Greenville in 1872. The pop. in 1850 was 6,856; in 1870, 82,546; in 1880, 120,722, making it the 17th city in point of pop. in the U. States.

Kansas, a W. State bounded N. by Neb., E. by Mo., S. by the Ind. T., and W. by Col. It is situated between lat. 37° and 40° N. and lon. 94° 40' and 102° W. It has the form of a rectangular parallelogram, 410 m. long from E. to W. and 210 m. wide from N. to S.; area, 81,700 sq. m.—Kansas is an undulating plain, gently sloping from W. to E. at an average of nearly 7 ft. per mile. The mouth of the Kansas R. at the E. line of the State, is 750 ft. above the sea-level; the average altitude of the W. boundary is abt. 3,500 ft. The broad prairie surface is diversified by an endless succession of valleys and woodlands. The great central valley is traversed by the Kansas or Kaw R. which, inclusive of the Smokyhill branch, extends the entire length of the State. Lateral valleys on the N. are formed by the Saline, Solomon, Republican, and Blue Rs., and other smaller streams. Another broad valley is formed in the S. half of the State by the Arkansas R. with lateral valleys on the N. traversed by the Walnut, Little Arkansas, Pawnee Fork, and other streams. The S.E. portion contains the important Neosho valley, and the smaller valleys of the Osage and Verdigris. In the extreme S.W. and along the S. boundary are the valley of the Cimarron, and a network of the S. tributaries of the Arkansas. Numerous small alluvials of the Missouri enrich and diversify the N.E. quarter of the State. The streams of Kansas are usually fed by perennial springs, and as a rule, the E. and middle portions of the State are well watered. The W. part is more elevated, and water is less abundant.—The surface presents three distinct geological sections. The E. portion of the State belongs to the carboniferous system, in which are found inexhaustible beds of valuable lúminous coal, often at shallow depths or cropping out on the surface. It is mined in 24 cos., the product for the year 1880 being 763,297 tons valued at $1,497,268. The central portion belongs to the triassic formation, with magnesian limestone, ferruginous sandstone, and gypsum as the representative rocks. The W. portion of the State belongs to the cretaceous formation, in which chalks and a species of native quicklime are very prominent in the river bluffs. Lead mines are extensively worked in the S.E. portion of the State, and prosperous towns and cities are growing up in connection with these mines. In the central region, salt is produced from wells, and appears in occasional marshes. The salt of the S.W. is found in beds and dry incrustations, varying in thickness from a few inches to 2 ft. The salts of Kansas are remarkably free from lime and other impurities. The lignite found near the Colorado line makes a valuable domestic fuel.—The climate of Kansas is exceptionally salubrious. Extremes of heat and cold occur, as in all open prairie countries, but as a rule the winters are dry and mild, while the summer heats are tempered by the perpetual prairie breezes. The summer nights are invariably cool and refreshing. The mean annual temperature at Fort Riley for 23 years has been 53°. The average annual rainfall at the city of Lawrence for six years (1875-1880), was 32.68 inches.—The soil of the upland prairies is generally a deep rich clay loam, of a dark color. The bottom lands near the streams are a black sandy loam; and the intermediate lands, or "second bottoms," show a rich and deep black loam, containing very little sand. These soils are all easily cultivated, free from stones, and exceedingly productive. There are exceptional spots on the upland prairies composed of stiff clay, not as easily cultivated, but very productive when properly managed and enriched.

Timber is abundant along the streams in the eastern section of the State, but is less plentiful in the central portion, and very scarce in some parts of the west. The varieties of timber embrace oak, elm, black walnut, cottonwood, mulberry, box, elder, willow, hickory, sycamore, white ash, and other hard and soft woods. The bright climate and pure atmosphere are admirably adapted to the growth of the apple, pear, peach, plum, grape, and cherry. The smaller fruits also, with scarce, an exception, flourish finely. Trees never suffer from sodden or water-soaked roots, and very seldom from the winter's cold, when reasonable judgment and care have been exercised in selecting and managing the grounds. The number of bearing trees in the State in 1882 has been estimated abt. as follows:—2,500,000 apple, 100,000 pear, 8,000,000 peach, 200,000 plum, and 1,000,000 cherry trees. The planting of trees is still on the increase, and the older orchards are very profitable. The principal agricultural prod. for the year 1880 were as follows:—Indian corn, 101,420,718 bush.; winter wheat, 23,507,223; spring wheat, 1,772,661; rye, 676,507; oats, 11,482,796; barley, 287,057; buckwheat, 43,455; Irish potatoes, 4,919,227; sweet potatoes, 391,196; castor beans, 558,974; flax seed, 1,245,279; sorghum syrup, 3,787,585 gallons; cotton, 142,517 lbs.; hemp, 635,872 lbs.; millet and Hungarian hay, 629,084 tons; Timothy hay, 79,634 tons; hay from wild or native grasses, 798,707 tons; clover pasture, 5,927 acres; blue grass pasture, 38,259 acres; native grass pasture, 901,125 acres; produce of market gardens to the value of $449,797.—The wide prairies, with their nutritious grasses for hay and grazing and their never-failing springs of pure water, make the State a very paradise to the herd-man and stock-raiser. The following are the statistics for 1880:—horses, 367,589; mules and asses, 58,303; milch cows, 366,640; other horned cattle, 748,672; sheep, 426,492; swine, 1,281,630; value of farm animals, $55,116,383 value of poultry and eggs sold, $531,550; wool (clip of 1879), 1,194,453 lbs.; honey 370,398 lbs.; wax 10,949 lbs. The great herds of buffalo which formerly overran the plains have disappeared, the elk is gone, and deer and other game are less plentiful than formerly. There remain, however, the rabbit, hare, turkey, prairie hen, quail, and the usual variety of migratory water-fowl, to gratify the sportsman. The numerous streams are well supplied with fish of choice varieties and of unusually large size.—The numerous water-courses of Kansas afford an abundance of power: but as in all new States, the people have first devoted themselves to the development of the land. The manuf. interests, are, however, already assuming in the E. section of the State, where coal is plentiful. At Leavenworth there are manuf. of iron bridges, engines, boilers, stoves, railroad iron, and miner's tools. They are also manuf. of wagons, carriages, carpets, soaps, paints, and cement, at Leavenworth, Fort Scott, Lawrence, Columbus, Ottawa, and other places. At Topeka, Parsons, Armstrong, and Argentine there are rolling mills and railroad repair shops, while planing-mills, tanneries, cheese factories, and pork-packing establishments are found in various localities. In 1880, Kansas had 2,803 manuf. establishments, employing 12,062 hands capital invested, $11,192,315; wages paid during the year $3,995,010; value of materials, $21,453,141; value of prod. $30,843,777.—There are 31 lines of railroads in the States, with an aggregate length of complete track of 3,718 m. in 1882, which greatly facilitates the internal commerce. Kansas has an eastern front of 150 m. on the Missouri R. which is navigable for steamboats of all sizes. The internal rivers of the State are not utilized for commercial purposes. By means of these railroads and the Missouri R. immense quantities of wheat, corn, cattle and swine are sent from Kansas to the eastern markets: flour is sent south, southwest, and west, and butter, poultry, and eggs, with large quantities of vegetables, hay, and garden produce, to the western mining regions.—The public schools are liberally endowed and supported. Two sections of land (1,280 acres) are set apart in each congressional district for school fund purposes. There were, in 1882, 6,322 public school buildings, and the permanent school fund amounted to $2,297,590. The teachers employed numbered 8,208; children of school age, 346,792; total school enrollment, 247,034; total school attendance, 139,776. The State supports a university at Lawrence, and a normal school at Emporia; and the agricultural college at Manhattan is endowed by the general government. There are also State institutions for the education of the blind, and the deaf and dumb, and for the care of the insane. A reform school for juvenile offenders is being built at the State capital. The principal colleges are St. Benedict's (Roman Catholic), at Atchison, founded in 1859; Washburn college (Congregational), at Topeka, founded in 1865; Highland university (Presbyterian); Baker university (Methodist Episcopal), at Baldwin City; college of the sisters of Bethany (Episcopal), at Topeka; and Ottawa university (Baptist), at Ottawa. The Kansas academy of science was organized in 1868 as a society of natural history, but was enlarged in its scope in 1871, and incorporated the following year. In its present form it comprehends observers and investigators in every line of scientific inquiry, and aims to increase and diffuse a knowledge of science particularly in its relation to Kansas.—The State is divided into 104 cos., viz.: Allen, Anderson, Arapahoe, Atchison, Barbour, Barton, Bourbon, Brown, Butler, Chase, Chataqua, Cherokee, Cheyenne, Clark, Clay, Cloud, Coffey, Comanche, Cowley, Crawford, Davis, Decatur, Dickinson, Doniphan, Douglas, Edwards, Elk, Ellis, Ellsworth, Ford, Franklin, Gove, Graham, Grant, Gray, Greeley, Greenwood, Hamilton, Harper, Harvey, Hodgeman, Jackson, Jefferson, Jewell, Johnson, Kansas, Kearney, Kingman, Labette, Lane, Leavenworth, Lincoln, Linn, Lyon, McPherson, Marion, Marshall, Meade, Miami, Mitchell, Montgomery, Morris, Nemaha, Neosho, Ness, Norton, Osage, Osborne, Ottawa, Pawnee, Phillips, Pottawatomie, Pratt, Rawlins, Reno, Republic, Rice, Riley, Rooks, Rush, Russell, St. John, Saline, Scott, Sedgwick, Sequoyah, Seward, Shawnee, Sheridan, Sherman, Smith, Stafford, Stanton, Stevens, Sumner, Thomas, Trego, Wabaunsee, Wallace, Washington, Wichita, Wilson, Woodson, Wyandotte. The principal cities are Leavenworth, Topeka (the cap.), Atchison, Lawrence, Wyandotte, Fort Scott, Wichita, Emporia, Parsons, and Ottawa. The legislative authority is vested in a senate of 33 members and a house of representatives numbering 105 members. There are annual sessions, and the compensation is $3 per day during actual service. The governor and other executive officers are chosen for a term of two years. The supreme court consists of 3 judges, elected by the people, and there are 15 district courts. Kansas is entitled to 7 representatives in congress, and has, therefore, 9 electoral votes. The State debt in 1881 was $1,181,975. The val. of taxable prop. in that year, as fixed by the State board, was $284,688,955.—Kansas belongs to that immense tract of country, purchased by the U. States from France in 1803, known as the Louisiana purchase. It was organized and opened for settlement as a territory by act of congress in May, 1854, and was admitted into the Union as the 34th State Jan. 29, 1861. By act passed in 1881, the manuf. and sale of intoxicating liquors was prohibited in Kansas. Pop. in 1860, 107,206; in 1870, 364,690; in 1880, 996,096 (of whom 536,667 males and 459,429 females; 886,010 natives, and 110,086 of foreign birth; 652,155 whites, 43,107 colored, 19 Chinese, and 815 Indians).

Kansas City, Mo., a city of Jackson co., the second in the State in size and importance, situated on the right bank of the Missouri R. just below the mouth of Kansas R. and near the Kansas border, 135 m. W.N.W. Jefferson City, and 325 m. W. by N. from St. Louis. The site, which was originally very rough and uneven, has been leveled, and now presents a moderately even appearance, except where a high bluff divides the upper or hill part of the city from the "bottom" or low lands where the railroad depots are. It is not regularly laid out, but the streets are wide, and are graded and sewered, provided with sidewalks, and lighted with gas. The buildings are chiefly of brick. It is supplied with water by extensive water-works, combining the reservoir, the stand-pipe, and the Holly system. The Missouri is here spanned by a bridge 1,387 ft. long, resting on seven piers, erected at a cost of $1,000,000. Several lines of street railroad run to various parts of the city and to the suburbs of Wyandotte, Kan., and Westport. The surrounding country is fertile, and abounds in coal, lead, iron, zinc, salt, gypsum, fire-clay, and building stone. By means of 9 railroads (and several others in construction) centering in a common station, the city commands the trade not only of W. Missouri and Kansas, but also of N. Texas and part of Colorado and New Mexico. The chief importance of Kansas City consists in its being the centre of the live-stock traffic for the States W. of the Mississippi—a business which has enormously increased since the completion of the M.P.R.R. connecting this city through the Ind. Ter. with the great stock-raising regions of Texas. The pork-packing business is also rapidly assuming importance. The city has a board of trade, 7 banks, 28 churches, 14 schools, 2 medical colleges (with a medical journal), 1 seminary and 1 hospital (both Roman Catholic), a city hospital, orphan asylum, work-house and woman's home, 2 theatres, an opera-house, an efficient fire department and police force. There are 8 daily, 2 tri-wkly, 17 wkly, 2 semi-monthly and 2 monthly papers. Pop. in 1860, 4,418; in 1870, 32,230; in 1880, 55,787.

Kansas Indians, a tribe of the Dakota family. They are an offshoot of the Osages, and resemble them in person, character, customs, and language. By act of May 8, 1862, Congress, with their consent, provided for the sale of their reservation in Kansas and their removal to the Osage country in the Indian Territory. They now number abt. 600.

Kansas River, or Kaw River, is formed by the confluence near Junction City of the Smoky Hill and Solomon Rs., whence it flows in an E. course abt. 150 m. to the Missouri near Kansas City. Its principal affluents are the Republican, the Big Blue and the Grass-hopper Rs. from the N., and the Wakarusa from the S. It has innumerable smaller tributaries. It is not navigable, though steamboats have ascended to Junction City on the Smoky Hill.

Kentucky, an interior State, bounded N.W. and N. by the Ohio R., separating it from Illinois, Indiana and Ohio, E. by Big Sandy R., separating it from West Virginia, and the Cumberland Mts., separating it from Virginia, S. by Tennessee, and W. by the Mississippi R., separating it from Missouri. It is situated between lat. 36° 30' and 39° 10' N., and lon. 81° 55' and 89° 30' W. Its greatest length is 400 m. and its greatest breadth 177 m.; area, 40,000 sq. m. The S.E. portion of the State is broken by the Cumberland, the Owsley and the Laurel Mts., whose highest summit does not exceed 3,000 ft.; N. and W. of the hilly region lies an undulating tableland, intersected by numerous narrow and deep valleys. The W. portion of Ky., is divided between the "barrens" and a country which is partially hilly. The barrens, which occupy chiefly the tract between the Green and Cumberland Rs., are almost treeless, but the level surface is diversified by low round-topped hills, called "oak knobs" on account of the trees which cover them. The alluvial bottoms between these hills and the Ohio and its affluents are exceedingly rich. On the N. and W. the barrens are margined by a more broken and hilly country, which gradually passes to the low flats which skirt the Ohio and Mississippi Rs. —Nearly all the streams draining Ky., are tributaries of the Ohio R., which washes the entire N. boundary a distance of over 600 m. The principal are the Big Sandy, which forms the N. W. State line; the Licking which in winter and spring is navigable for abt. 70 m. and falls into the Ohio opposite Cincinnati; the Kentucky, 260 m. long and large enough for steamboats to ascend 80 m.; Green R., 300 m. long and navigable for two-thirds of its extent; the Cumberland, 600 m. long and navigable to Nashville, Tenn., 200 m.; the Tennessee, which has a course of 70 m. across Ky. These rivers abound in fish. Salmon weighing 30 pounds and catfish exceeding 100 pounds in weight have been caught. The primitive forests have not yet been entirely cleared away, and Ky., has an abundance of the best quality of timber. Among the trees are the walnut, ash, oak, hickory, elm, gum, poplar, chestnut, sugar-maple, magnolia, cottonwood, pecan, redbud, locust, walnut, etc.—The State is abundantly supplied with coal and iron. The whole coal area is abt. 14,000 sq. m., of which 10,000 are in the eastern and 4,000 in the western basin. Most of this coal, especially in the W., is a soft bituminous coal, though some cannel is found. The E. deposits have more splint coals, which are better adapted to smelting and iron making. The yield of the coal mines for the year 1880 was 935,857 tons valued at $1,123,046. The iron district of the State covers about 20,000 sq. m. in almost all of which ores of such richness as to pay well for working are found. The product of all iron mines in 1880 was 33,522 tons of ore, valued at $88,930. Lead exists but has not been successfully worked. Building stone of excellent quality exists in several sections, and is exported to some extent. Silver ore has been found near Cumberland Falls. A more remarkable contribution to economic geology is that afforded by the salt springs or licks of the State. The early deposited rocks were laid down in shallow waters, and absorbed considerable quantities of salt from the brine. In time, springs charged with this saline deposit found their way to the surface, usually in some marshy valley, and thither all the herbivorous mammals naturally resorted to lick the salt which had crystallized around the springs. This practise must have continued for many thousands of years, and hence we find in these swampy licks vast quantities of the remains of these animals. There are numerous medicinal springs of great virtue in the State; those of Harrodsburg, Blue Lick, etc. contain considerable quantities of sulphur. The caverns of the State form one of its most remarkable features; the Mammoth Cave is the most widely known of the thousands in the State, though possibly not the largest. (See MAMMOUTH CAVE). They occur throughout the entire range of the sub-carboniferous limestone, or over a region of 6,000 to 8,000 sq. m. In some places there are what are called sink-holes, considerable tracts often containing trees of large size, under which the roof of the cavern has given way and precipitated these patches (which are from 50 to 150 ft. or more in diameter), to the floor of the cavern, often 200 and 300 ft. below. A few of them are funnel-shaped and very deep, having been sounded to the depth of 300 ft. without reaching bottom.—The temperature of Ky. is a pleasant mean between the extremes of the North and South. The range of the thermometer at Louisville for 3 consecutive years was from 4° below zero to 102° above. There is an annual mean of 55.23°, which is 1.5° warmer than the city of Washington, and about one-fifth of a degree cooler than San Francisco. Snow does not remain long and cattle range the fields all winter.—The garden of Ky., is in the blue limestone or "bluegrass" region, stretching from the Ohio as far south as Lexington. The Kentuckians say "the sun never shone on a fairer country." Its soil is "loose, friable and of a deep black or mulatto color." Upon a single acre 1,400 pounds of tobacco have been grown. The "barrens," which were formerly considered of little value, and given to settlers by the State, have been found quite productive. Besides being a great grain growing State, Ky. is the first State in the yield of tobacco, producing in 1880 36 per cent. of the entire product of the country. It stands also first in the production of hemp and flax. Some cotton (1,367 bales in 1880) is raised along the Tennessee, Cumberland and Mississippi Rs. The chief agricultural products for the year 1880 were as follows:

Products.	Quantity produced.	Yield per acre.	Number of acres.	Value.

There were on farms 372,648 horses, 116,153 mules, 36,166 working oxen, 301,882 milch cows, 505,746 other cattle, 1,000,269 sheep, and 2,225,225 hogs.—In 1880, according to the census of that year, Ky. had 5,328 manufacturing establishments, employing 37,691 hands; capital invested, $45,813,039; wages paid during the year, $11,657,844; value of materials, $47,461,890; value of products, $75,483,377. The leading industries were distilled liquors (chiefly whiskey), tobacco manufacture, flour and feed, iron manufacture, and lumber. (See LOUISVILLE). The State has little direct foreign commerce, but its domestic commerce is very extensive. The principal exports are hemp, flax, tobacco, horses, mules, hogs, cattle, bagging, and rope. (For shipping statistics see LOUISVILLE). In 1882, Ky. had 1,715 m. of railroad in operation, and other roads were in process of construction and projected.—A school law, providing a system of free schools on the New England model, was passed in 1873, and the interest in public school education in the State has been since gradually increasing. The number of children of school age in 1880 was 539,843. The Ky. university, established in 1858, embraces a college of arts, the agricultural and mechanical college, the college of the Bible, a commercial college, and a college of law. In 1865, the agricultural and mechanical college, established by means of the congressional land grant, was made a part of the university, and the citizens of Lexington having given $100,000 for the purchase of an experimental and model farm and the erection of buildings for the agricultural college, the university was removed to that city. In 1881, the State normal school was separated from the university, and is now fitted to accomplish a work which, during its former connection, it was never prepared to do. The Ky. military institute in Frankfort was organized in 1846.

Among the most prominent educational institutions are Berea college, at Berea, at which students are received without regard to sex or color, Bethel college, at Russellville, Cecilian college, at Elizabethtown, Centre college, at Danville, Eminence college, at Eminence, Georgetown college, at Georgetown, and St. Mary's college, at St. Mary's Station. The leading institutions for the education of women are Daughters' college at Harrodsburg, Georgetown female seminary, Lebanon female college, Logan female college at Russellville, Hocker female college, Lexington Baptist female college, St. Catherine's academy, and Christchurch seminary at Lexington. —The charitable institutions are the State house of reform for juvenile delinquents, established in 1872, the Western lunatic asylum at Hopkinsville, the Eastern lunatic asylum at Lexington, the Ky. institution for the education and training of feeble minded children at Frankfort, and the Ky. institution for the education of deaf mutes at Danville. The Ky. penitentiary is located at Frankfort. —The State is divided into 117 cos., viz.: Adair, Allen, Anderson, Ballard, Barren, Bath, Boone, Bourbon, Boyd, Boyle, Bracken, Breathitt, Breckenridge, Bullitt, Butler, Caldwell, Callaway, Campbell, Carroll, Carter, Casey, Christian, Clarke, Clay, Clinton, Crittenden, Cumberland, Daviess, Edmundson, Elliott, Estill, Fayette, Fleming, Floyd, Franklin, Fulton, Gallatin, Garrard, Grant, Graves, Grayson, Green, Greenup, Hancock, Hardin, Harlan, Harrison, Hart, Henderson, Henry, Hickman, Hopkins, Jackson, Jefferson, Jessamine, Josh Bell, Johnson, Kenton, Knox, La Rue, Laurel, Laurence, Lee, Letcher, Lewis, Lincoln, Livingston, Logan, Lyon, Madison, Magoffin, Marion, Marshall, Martin, Mason, McBracken, McLean, Meade, Menifee, Mercer, Metcalf, Monroe, Montgomery, Morgan, Muhlenburgh, Nelson, Nicholas, Ohio, Oldham, Owen, Owsley, Pendleton, Perry, Pike, Powell, Pulaski, Robertson, Rock Castle, Rowan, Russell, Scott, Shelby, Simpson, Spencer, Taylor, Todd, Trigg, Trimble, Union, Warren, Washington, Wayne, Webster, Whitley, Wolfe, Woodford. The incorporated cities are Covington, Frankfort (the cap.), Henderson, Hopkinsville, Lexington (the most important inland city), Louisville (the largest city and commercial emporium of the State), Maysville, Newport, Owensborough, and Paducah. —The present constitution of Ky. was adopted in 1850. The legislative authority is vested in a senate of 38 members chosen for 4 years, and a house of representatives of 100 members, holding office for 2 years. The sessions of the legislator are biennial. The governor (salary, $5,000) and other executive officers are elected for a term of four years. Four judges, having a salary of $5,000 each, constitute the court of appeals. The State sends 11 representatives to congress, and has 13 electoral votes. There is no State debt. The valuation of taxable property in 1882 was $354,179,311. —Ky. was first settled in 1773. The name signifies "the dark and bloody ground," from the continual wars which the Indians waged with one another upon this middle ground. They received the whites with the bitterest hostility, and many were the victims of the savage tomahawk and scalping knife. Ky. was admitted into the Union as the 15th State, July 1, 1792. During the civil war the State remained in the Union, and was the scene of several battles. Pop. in 1790, 73,077; in 1800, 220,595; in 1830, 687,917; in 1860, 1,155,684 (of whom 10,684 free colored and 225,483 slaves); in 1870, 1,321,011; in 1880, 1,648,690 (of whom 832,590 males and 816,100 females, 1,589,173 natives, and 59,717 of foreign birth, 1,377,179 whites, 271,451 colored, 10 Chinese, and 50 Indians).

border of the State, in the Cumberland Mts. Its principal feeders are the North, Middle, and South forks which unite in Lee co., near Proctor. The stream then flows in a tortuous N.W. direction until it enters the Ohio in Carroll co. Its length from the junction of its head streams to its mouth is 260 m., but the distance in a straight line between these two points is only 108 m. The scenery on the banks is famous for its romantic beauty. For a great part of its course the river flows between perpendicular limestone rocks, through which it appears to have gradually worn its way. The Kentucky has no large tributaries. It is navigable by means of locks and dams by steamboats 40 m. above Frankfort (62 m. from its mouth), and by flatboats 100 m. higher.

—a city of Lee co., on the W. bank of the Mississippi R., near its confluence with the Des Moines, abt. midway between Burlington and Quincy, 135 m. S.E. Des Moines, and 300 m. above St. Louis. It lies at the foot of the lower rapids, which are 12 m. long with a fall of 24 ft., and is at the head of navigation for the larger class of steamboat navigation; and is a port of delivery. Keokuk is built on limestone bluffs 150 ft. high, overlooking the river, and surrounded by a rich and productive district: is well built, chiefly of brick, Main street, the principal thoroughfare, being 100 ft. wide and more than a mile in length. A magnificent iron railroad and highway bridge, 2,300 ft. in length, spans the Mississippi; 6 lines of steam packets ply daily to and fro; 6 railroads are centering here, and 3 others are projected. It has 20 churches, 2 nat. and 3 other banks, 2 daily and 5 wkly papers, 1 medical college, 4 large public school buildings, a U. S. court-room, a public library, gas-works, a loan and building association, and several large pork-packing establishments. A large wholesale business is done in all kinds of merchandise. The ship canal, 9 m. long and 300 ft. wide, constructed by the U. State government around the lower rapids at a cost of abt. $8,000,000 will secure considerable water-power for manuf. purposes. Key West, (from the Spanish Capso Hueso "bone reef"), Fla., a town ♦, port of entry, and cap. of Monroe co., is the extreme S. boundary of the U. States, and forms the entrance to the Gulf of Mexico, being distant about 68' from the coast of Cuba; 110 m. N. by E. from Havana, and 430 m. S. by E. from Tallahassee. It is situated on an island of the same name, 7 m. long by 1 to 2 wide, of coral formation, elevated only 11 ft. above the level of the sea, and covered with a thin layer of soil, on which tropical fruits are successfully cultivated. The town is a naval station, has a large depot for U. S. stores, &c.; it possesses a good and spacious harbor; is in connection with the Northern States by Mallory's line of steamers, and with New Orleans by a line of steamers running from that place weekly via Cedar Keys, where it connects with the railroad. Key West has a fine marine railway, where ships of 300 tons may be hauled out for repairs. There are 7 churches, 2 wkly papers, 2 public and several private schools, a convent and several large and extensive cigar factories. On the S.W. point is a light-house, with a fixed Kittatinny, or BLUE MOUNTAINS. This range begins in Ulster co., N.Y., passes S.W. through a corner of N.J., crosses the Delaware at the Water Gap, trends W.S.W. through Pa., crosses the Susquehanna a few miles above Harrisburg, and the Potomac near Berkeley Springs, and continues with gradually lessening altitude through Va., N.C. and Tenn. into Ala., thus having a total length of more than 800 m. In average elevation and bulk the Blue Mts. exceeds the Blue Ridge, which has acquired greater prominence on maps on account of its greater definiteness, springing from a narrow base, and the greater height of some of its peaks. The average elevation of the Blue Mts. is from 800 to 2,500 feet.

Klamath, Cal., tp., Humboldt co. Pop. 1,143.

Klamath Agency, Oreg., p.o., Lake co.

Klamath Lake, Oreg., extends across the S. border of the State from the E. base of the Cascade Mts. into Cal., Siskiyou co., having a length of 44 m. The S. and N. parts are connected by a small strait, and the former is called Lower Klamath. The N. extremity is 14 m. wide. Klamath R. is the outlet.

Klamath Mill, Cal., p.o., Siskiyou co.

Klamath River, Cal., rises in Lower Klamath Lake, S. part of Oreg. and flows W. and S. across the Cal. frontier, where it changes to W.S.W. until joined by Trinity R. and then makes a sharp turn to N.N.W. and falls into Pacific Ocean in Del Norte co. It is 275 m. long, abounds in salmon, and valuable gold diggings are on the banks. It has a bar at its mouth which can be crossed at high tide by ships of the line. The R. is navigable for abt. 40 m. by small steamers.

Klamaths, the comprehensive name given to two or three distinct tribes on the Klamath R., living partly in Oregon and partly in California. They seem to have had no recognized tribal name. Those toward the mouth of the river and on the coast were called Euroc or Pohlik, meaning down; those on the upper river were termed Cahroc or Pehtsik. The Quoratem, considered by some as Eurocs, lay in the middle, from Bluff to Clear Creek. Above the Cahrocs were the Moadoes or Modocs ("head of the river"), not usually included under the term Klamath. These tribes differed in language and type. The Cahrocs are said to be the finest California Indians, lively, enterprising, and energetic, cleanly in their persons, and great bathers. The Eurocs were darker and inferior. In 1864 they ceded to the U. States all their lands except a reservation on the Klamath Lakes of 1,200 sq. m., where they are gradually adapting themselves to the pursuits of agriculture, and especially devoting themselves to lumbering. Their number is now reduced to abt. 500.

Klikitat, Wash., a S. co., separated from Oregon by Columbia R., and drained by the Klikitat, Pattaha, Womumchee, and White Salmon Rs.; area, 2,300 sq. m. The Cascade range is in the W. part and in the N.W. is Mt. Adams, 9,570 ft. high. The Klikitat prairie occupies the S.E. part. The soil is fertile, and the best part of the co. contains the Yakima Indian reservation and the Simcoe agency. The chief prod. in 1880 were 75,322 bush. of wheat, 33,488 of oats, and 14,480 of barley. Cap., Rockland. Val. of taxable prop. abt. $400,000. Pop. 4,057 (of whom 461 for., and 184 Indians).

Klikitats, a tribe of Indians living in Wash. Ter., in the region N. of the Dalles, between the Cascade range and the Columbia R. They belong to the Sahaptin family of the Columbian group, and are therefore akin to the Nez Percés and Walla Wallas, while they seem to be almost identical with the Yakimas, from whom, apparently, they are distinguished only by geographical location. They were formerly quite migratory in their habits of life, but their most permanent abode was in the valleys between Mts. St. Helen and Adams, W. and S. of the Yakimas. They have been consolidated with the Yakimas, and placed upon the reservation near Fort Simcoe, E. of the Coast range, where they have made considerable progress in civilization. They are divided into five bands, and number abt. 2,000.

Lackawanna, Pu., a N.E. co., drained by the Lackawanna, Susquehanna and Lehigh Rs.; area, abt. 450 sq. m. It has an uneven surface with fertile soil lying on a bed of Devonian and carboniferous rocks. The chief agricultural prod. in 1880 were 14,047 bush. of wheat, 140,314 of corn, 237,107 of oats, 29,325 of rye, and 68,650 of buckwheat. Cap., Scranton. Pop. 89,268 (of whom 26,911 for., and 297 colored). This co., formed in 1879 from part of Luzerne co., received its name from the river and coal basin of which it partly contains. The river rises in the N.E. corner of the State, enters the N.E. extremity of the N. anthracite coal field, along which it continues for 30 m. past Carbondale, Archbald, Providence, and Scranton, to the N. branch of the Susquehanna, which it enters at Pittston, Luzerne co. The continuation of the Lackawanna valley S.W. of Pittston is the Wyoming valley, and they are shut in by the Shawnee Mts.

on the N.W. and the Wyoming, or Moosic Mts. on the S.W., the only gaps being where the Susquehanna enters at Pittston and passes out at Nanticoke. These mountains are steep rocky ridges, with a general elevation of from 1,500 to 2,000 ft. above the valley, which at Wilkesbarre is 525 ft. above the sea. The valley has an irregular trough-like form and an undulating surface, corresponding to that of the rock strata and coal beds beneath; and it is studded with thriving cities and towns, collieries, rolling mills, and blast furnaces. The entire area is 198 sq. m., of which the Lackawanna valley has 100 sq. m. The coal field, the largest and finest of the anthracite basins, fills both valleys, and is of a narrow ellipsoidal form, slightly crescent-shaped, stretching in a N.E. and S.W. direction about 50 m., and not attaining in its widest central portion a greater width than 5 m. This coal field, being the nearest to New York, supplies a large portion of the anthracite consumed in that State and further E. Nine-tenths of the coal is carried over the mountains. Around Carbondale, coal is mined by the Delaware and Hudson canal company, and carried by their railroads over the Moosic Mts. to Honesdale 28 m. and thence by canal to Rondout on the Hudson R., 108 m. The D., L.&W.R.R. company, whose chief operations are at Scranton, have 618 m. of railroad. There are other smaller proprietors. The production of anthracite coal in Lackawanna co., for the year 1880 was 5,648,365 tons which was 26.69 per cent. of the total product of anthracite in that year.

Lake George, N. Y., a picturesque sheet of water in Warren and Washington cos., 36 m. long from N.E. to S.W., from $\frac{1}{2}$ m. to 4 m. wide, and in some places 400 ft. deep, discharging into Lake Champlain on the north. It is remarkable for the transparency of its water, its multitude of little islands, and the beautiful scenery of its banks. Black Mt., on the E. shore, has an elevation of 2,200 ft. above the surface of the lake; and 12 m. distant from it is a very steep rock rising 200 ft. from the water, down which it is said Major Rogers, when pursued by Indians during the French war, slid and landed safely on the ice. Not far from this spot is the place where the English under Lord Howe landed previous to their attack on Fort Ticonderoga. Steamers ply upon the lake in summer, between Caldwell and Fort Ticonderoga, conveying large numbers of tourists attracted by its beautiful scenery. Caldwell, Bolton, and other places on its banks, are favorite summer resorts. Lake George bears a conspicuous place in American history. See CALDWELL.

—a city♦, cap. of above co., situated in the midst of a rich and beautiful region, on Conestoga R., 68 m. W. of Philadelphia, by the P. R.R., and 42 m. S.W. Reading by P. & R. R.R. It is handsomely laid out, its broad streets are lighted by gas, and traversed by street railways; has a large opera-house, 2 public libraries, and several good hotels. The prominent public buildings are the court-house, county prison, poor-house, masonic hall, odd fellows hall, city hall, market houses, and the water-works buildings. A settlement was formed here in 1729, and from 1799 to 1812, Lancaster was the cap. of the State. It was incorporated a city in 1818, and from 1750 to 1825, was the largest inland city in the U. States. It has had a steady, substantial growth, and is probably one of the most pleasant residence cities in the Commonwealth. Its many handsome and palatial residences and substantial, imposing business blocks, give it a decided metropolitan appearance. There are 39 churches, efficient police and fire departments, 3 nat. and 4 other banks, 3 daily and 5 wkly papers. Lancaster has 35 graded public schools, in addition to which there are Catholic schools, a theological seminary, the Franklin and Marshall College, and Yeates Institute. The city has very extensive manufacturing interests, prominent among which is the Lancaster Watch Company. In addition to this the following manufactured articles are produced; bentwood, glue, rope, pottery ware, hubs, lumber, machinery, iron, engines, boilers, combs, fan blowers, brass goods, belting, leather, cigars, tanner's machinery, horse collars, brick, beer, cotton goods, fertilizers, furniture, tobacco press, flour, edge tools, brushes and organs. Outside of Philadelphia this is the most extensive leaf tobacco market in the State. A large portion of the surrounding country is devoted exclusively to the growth of tobacco. Lancaster is governed by a mayor, a select council of 9 members, and a common council of 27 members. The debt of city in 1882 was $550,053, and the assessed value of its real and personal property was $11,400,000. Pop. 25,769.

Lewiston, Me., city♦, Androscoggin co., on the E. bank of the Androscoggin R., opposite Auburn, with which it is connected by four bridges, 36 m. N. of Portland by M. C. RR. Its importance is chiefly due to its water privileges, which are among the best in New England, now applied to a great variety of machinery, involving large manufacturing interests. The river breaks over a diagonal ledge of rocks, and falls more than 50 ft. in a distance of 200 ft. The natural advantages thus furnished are increased by stone dams extending across the river, and by a canal 60 ft. wide reaching from above the falls to the mills. The conformation of the ground is such that the water may be used several times. The Franklin company owns the water-power, canals, and other real estate, and rents to other companies. Lewiston has 14 churches, a handsome city hall, the Bates college (Free Baptist) and theological schools; a fine school system with costly edifices, a public library, 2 nat., 1 private, and 2 savings banks, 1 daily, 3 wkly and 1 monthly (college) papers. Long Branch, N.J., p.v. in Ocean tp., Monmouth co., 11 m. S. of Sandy Hook, and 36 m. S. of New York. This strip of sandy beach, backed by a bluff, on the Atlantic Ocean, has been for many years the most fashionable summer resort in the vicinity of New York. As years have gone by a series of hotels have been built along the bluff with a fine wide and well kept avenue between them and the ocean, until at present they extend in close order for nearly 2½ m. The beach below the bluff is given over to bathing-houses, and a few pavilions stand on the edge of the bluff. Interspersed along the beach are a number of very elegant private cottages and some few boarding-houses, the finest being, however, S. of the West End Hotel. The amusements at "The Branch" are bathing in the morning, driving in the afternoon, and dancing in the evening. Each of the hotels employ an orchestra by the season to furnish dancing and promenade music for the guests. From 4 to 7 p. m. Ocean av. is crowded with vehicles, most of them faultlessly appointed, and stylish equipages of every possible style, and filled with ladies in elaborate toilets. During the months of July and August the Branch is always overcrowded with guests, and races are run at the race-course known as Monmouth Park. It is accessible from New York by steamer from Pier 14 to Sandy Hook, and thence by the N.J.S.R.R., or by the C.R.R. of N.J., from the foot of Liberty st. Pop. 3,833.

Long Island, N. Y., a long, narrow, fish-shaped strip of land extending along the mainland from opposite Staten Island eastward to the Atlantic Ocean, being separated from the city of New York by East R. (which see) bounded N. by Long Island Sound, and washed on the S. by the ocean. Its greatest length from W. to E. is 115 m., and its average breadth from N. to S. 12 m. Along the N. shore, opposite the mainland, there is a narrow range of hills called the "backbone" of the island, but the remainder of the island slopes gradually to the ocean. The S. shore is one immense sand-bank, separated from the island proper for nearly its entire length by inlets from the ocean, the largest of which is the Great South Bay, which extends for 100 m. without a break behind the Great South Beach which is at no point more than 5 m. wide. Rockaway and Coney Island beaches, which have become famous summer resorts, owing to their proximity to New York, are only western extensions of the Great South Beach. The island is divided into the 3 cos. of Kings, Queens, and Suffolk. Besides Brooklyn it contains only one other municipality—that of Long Island City, which adjoins Brooklyn. The island is well supplied with railways at its W. end, opposite New York, and lengthwise the facilities are fairly ample elsewhere, but not so crosswise. The soil, except near the S. shore, where it is sandy, is tolerably fertile. Pop. 744,922.

Long Island City, N. Y., city♦ in Queens co., at the W. end of Long Island, opposite the upper part of New York City. It extends 3 m. E. and W. by 5 m. N. and S., and has a water front of 10 m. stretching along Newtown Creek on the S., which separates it from Brooklyn, and thence N. along East R. to Bowery Bay. It is divided into five wards, and contains 3 post offices. Astoria in the N., Ravenswood in the central portion, and Long Island City in the S. The S.W. portion is also called Hunter's Point. The N. portion is high and finely situated, and in Astoria and Ravenswood there are many beautiful drives and handsome residences. The plan has been liberally projected, with wide streets and avenues and 3 parks, but the actual laying out of the city has not advanced far. The city has 5 ward school houses, 1 daily and 5 wkly papers, a Baptist and a Methodist mission, and 14 churches. It was formed from a portion of the town of Newtown, and was incorporated in 1870. Pop. 17,129.

Long Island Sound, a large body of water lying between Long Island and New York and Connecticut, about 110 m. long, and varying from 2 to 20 m. in width. On the W. it is connected with the Atlantic by a strait called the East R., New York Bay, and the Narrows, and on the E. by a narrow passage called the Race. The principal rivers flowing into the sound from the mainland are the Housatonic, Connecticut, and Thames. It is in the route of a very large and important trade between the city of New York and the Eastern States, and is navigated by many regular lines of packets and steamers. There are numerous light-houses on its coasts.

Louisiana, one of the gulf States, bounded N. by Arkansas and Mississippi, E. by Mississippi, S.E. and S. by the Gulf of Mexico, and W. by Texas. The Mississippi R. forms the eastern boundary for 450 m. by its windings; the coast-line on the Gulf of Mexico is 1,250 m., and the Sabine R. constitutes the W. boundary for 500 m. The State is situated between lat. 29° and 33° N., and lon. 89° 5' and 94° W.; area, 45,420. No other State in the Union is so nearly level. The highest elevations in the N. and N.W. do not rise above 240 ft., and from these the land slopes gradually both toward the Mississippi and the Gulf. A large portion of the delta of the Mississippi, especially below New Orleans, is marshy, and actually below the river at high water. Along the Mississippi R. much of the land is below the surface of the river at the spring freshets, and is protected from overflow by levees or artificial embankments. These levees extend 120 m. above New Orleans and 43 m. below it. They are sometimes worn and broken through by the floods, and the "crevasses" thus produced cause the submergence of hundreds of thousands of acres. The lands of the State are usually classified as "good uplands;" "pine hill lands," usually not very fertile; "alluvial tracts;" "Bluff or Loess regions;" "marsh lands;" "the prairie regions;" and "the pine flats." The whole alluvial region of the delta is very fertile, and its deep black loam will yield enormous crops; the hilly country, on the contrary, is not very productive, and some portions of it are sandy barrens.—The Mississippi R. has a course of abt. 600 m. in the State, and is navigable for the largest steamers throughout its whole extent. The Red R. the second in size of the great tributaries of the Mississippi, enters the State in the N.W., and crosses it diagonally, forming an important avenue of inland commerce. Its principal affluent in the State is the Washita. The Sabine R. forms a part of the western boundary of the State, and the Calcasieu and Mermentau are also considerable streams. The Pearl, Tangipahoa, Tickfaw, and Amite Rs. are the principal streams E. of the Mississippi. Numerous lakes and lagoons are scattered over the State. The largest is Lake Ponchartrain, N. of the city of New Orleans, which has a navigable connection with the Gulf of Mexico, through Lake Borgne, and with Lake Manrepas on the W. These lakes are but expansions of the Amite R. Among the forest trees are the ash, beech, birch, catalpa, cypress, elm, gum, oak, hickory, black-walnut, locust, laurel, linden, magnolia, maple, mistletoe, mulberry, myrtle, palmetto, poplar, pine, sycamore, cottonwood, buckeye, pecan, persimmon, etc. The fruit trees are the orange, lemon, lime, fig, pine-apple, olive, pomegranate, peach, plum, apple, etc.—Coal, iron, petroleum, sulphur and rock salt are found in the State, but the latter only has been developed. There has been only a partial geological survey of the State, and the mineral resources are unknown and undeveloped. The climate in winter, owing to north winds, is more severe than in corresponding latitudes on the Atlantic coast. The summers are long and hot, and mephitic exhalations from the marshes in autumn generate malarial fevers. The mean temperature for the year 1881, at New Orleans (lat. 29° 57') was 68.4°; at Shreveport (lat. 32° 30'), 64.2°.—The staples of agriculture are cotton, sugar, rice, and corn. The other cereals are not generally cultivated. For the year 1880 the production of cotton was 508,569 bales; of corn, 332,158 bush. The rice and sugar are grown almost exclusively in the alluvial soil along the Mississippi. The sugar cane does not flourish above lat. 31°. La. produces most of the sugar made in the U. States. In 1880 the acreage was 181,502; the product 171,706 hhd. of sugar and 11,696,248 galls. of molasses. There are 1,144 sugar houses in the State. Rice is one of the growing industries of La. In 1880 the acreage was 42,000 and the product 23,188,311 lbs. Tobacco is not extensively grown. The product in 1880 was 55,944 lbs. Cattle, sheep and horses are raised in the State, and but little attention is paid to improved breeds. Sheep, cattle, mules and horses winter in the woods or wild cane brakes, without shelter, and come out in Feb. fat and sleek. The number of live stock in 1880 was 104,428 horses, 76,674 mules, 41,729 working oxen, 146,454 milch cows, 282,418 other cattle, 135,631 sheep, and 633,489 hogs.—In the census year 1880 La. had 1,533 manuf. establishments, employing 12,167 hands; capital invested, $11,462,468; wages paid during the year, $4,360,371; value of materials, $14,442,506; value of products, $24,205,183. The statistics of commerce and shipping are given in this work under NEW ORLEANS. There were in 1882 999 m. of railroad in operation.—Free schools are established by law, open to all children from 6 to 21 years of age, without distinction of color. In 1880 the statistics were: Public schools, 1,404 (for white youth, 955; for colored 539), youth of schoolage, 330,930; pupils enrolled, 78,528; teachers employed, 1,494; expenditures for public schools $529,065. The university of Louisiana and agricultural and mechanical college, at Baton Rouge, has a classical, scientific and commercial course. Other institutions for higher education are: Centenary college, college of the Immaculate Conception, Leland university; New Orleans university; St. Charles college; Straight university; St. Mary's, Jefferson college, and the Silliman female collegiate institute. The State institutions are the penitentiary at Baton Rouge, the insane asylum at Jackson, charity hospital at New Orleans, and the institutions for the education of the deaf and dumb and of the blind at Baton Rouge.—The civil divisions which are called counties in other States take the name of "parishes" in La. There are 58 parishes, viz.: Ascension, Assumption, Avoyelles, Bienville, Bossier, Caddo, Calcasieu, Caldwell, Cameron, Catahoula, Claiborne, Concordia, De Soto, East Baton Rouge, East Carroll, East Feliciana, Franklin, Grant, Iberia, Iberville, Jackson, Jefferson, La Fayette, La Fourche, Lincoln, Livingston, Madison, Morehouse, Natchitoches, Orleans, Ouachita, Plaquemines, Pointe Coupée, Rapides, Red River, Richland, Sabine, Saint Bernard, Saint Charles, Saint Helena, Saint James, Saint John Baptist, Saint Landry, Saint Martin, Saint Mary, Saint Tammany, Tangipahoa, Tensas, Terre Bonne, Union, Vermillion, Vernon, Washington, Webster, West Baton Rouge, West Carroll, West Feliciana, Winn. The incorporated cities are Baton Rouge (the cap.), Donaldsonville, New Orleans (the largest city and commercial emporium of the State), and Shreveport.—The government is administered under the constitution of 1879. The legislature which meets annually, consists of 36 senators elected for 4 years and 170 representatives elected for 2 years. The governor and other State officers are elected for a term of 4 years. The State sends 6 representatives to congress and has 8 electoral votes. The judicial power is vested in a supreme court of 5 judges appointed by the governor with the consent of the senate for 8 years. There are also district and parish courts. The code of Louisiana is made up of materials drawn from the old Spanish laws, the Roman civil law, the English common law and the Code Napoleon, modified by local enactments. The State debt recognized as of binding obligation on the 1st of January, 1883, amounted to $12,136,166.24, of which $11,730,973.69 were consols; and $406,092.55 the fundable portion of other debts still outstanding. The assessed value of taxable property in 1882 was $181,660,290; but it was generally admitted that this valuation was wrong, and that if the property of the State was thoroughly assessed, even at two-thirds of its value, it would show a valuation of quite $300,000,000. The constitution of 1879 limits taxation in the State for all purposes whatever to one cent on the dollar.—Robert Cavellier de la Salle first discovered the mouth of the Mississippi R., April 7, 1682. New Orleans was founded in 1718.

The territory was ceded to Spain by a secret treaty in 1762. Spain re-ceded it to France in 1800. Napoleon thought it unwise to retain his new possession. To his ministers he said: "The English have despoiled France of all her northern possessions in America, and now they covet those of the South. I am determined that they shall not have the Mississippi. I am inclined, in order to deprive them of all prospect of ever possessing it, to cede it to the U. States. Furthermore, the emperor needed money. A treaty was signed, April 30, 1803, by which the whole of the vast region stretching from the Gulf of Mexico to the lakes, and from the Mississippi to the Rocky Mts. was conveyed to the U. States for the sum of $15,000,000. Napoleon, pleased with his bargain, said: "By this cession of territory I have secured the power of the U. States and given to England a maritime rival who at some future time will humble her pride." La. was admitted into the Union as the 18th State, April 8, 1812. An ordinance of secession was passed Jan. 26, 1861. New Orleans was captured by a combined naval and land force of Federals, and May 1, 1862, Maj.-Gen. Benjamin F. Butler took possession of the city. The Red R. expedition, in 1864, proved disastrous to the Federals. After the cessation of hostilities the State was governed for a time by martial law, but finally was given over to the civil authorities (July 13, 1868). Pop. in 1810, 76,556; in 1830, 215,739; in 1860, 708,002 (of whom 18,647 free colored, and 331,726 slaves); in 1870, 726,915; in 1880, 939,946 (of whom 568,754 males and 471,192 females, 885,800 natives and 54,146 of foreign birth, 454,954 whites, 483,655 colored, 489 Chinese, and 848 Indians).

Louisville, Ky., the largest city and commercial metropolis of the State, port of delivery, cap. of Jefferson co., and the 16th city in the Union in point of pop., is situated at the falls of the Ohio R. and at the mouth of Beargrass Creek, 150 m. below Cincinnati by water, and 125 m. S.W. of the same city by O.&M. RR., 110 m. S. of Indianapolis by J. M. & I. RR., 185 m. N.E. Nashville and 377 m. N.E. Memphis by L. & N. RR. In high stages of water the Falls (or more properly rapids) disappear almost entirely, and steamboats pass over them; but, when the water is low, the whole width of the river has the appearance of a great many broken cascades of foam making their way over the rapids. To obviate the obstruction to navigation caused by the falls, a canal 2½ m. long has been cut around them. The city extends abt. 3 m. along the river and abt. 4 m. inland, embracing an area of 13 sq. m. The river is crossed by a railroad bridge 5,218 ft. long between abutments, costing $2,016,819. The streets are laid out at right angles, varying in width from 60 to 120 ft., clean and well paved. The business parts of the city are on the streets nearest the river, the southern portion being occupied by private residences, which are notable for beauty and elegance. Among the most prominent public buildings are the new city hall, U. States custom house and post office, almshouse, female high school. Kentucky school for the blind, public library of Kentucky, the court-house, the Louisville industrial exhibition, city hospital, U. States marine hospital, eruption hospital and the male and female houses of refuge. Louisville is noted for the excellence of its public schools. It is also one of the great centres for medical education. The medical department of the university of Louisville has alumni scattered over every State in the Union. The Louisville medical college, the Hospital medical college, a department of Central university, and the Kentucky school of medicine have each large corps of instructors and a widely distributed list of students. The city has numerous social and benevolent societies; abt. 100 churches, 4 theatres and 1 opera house; 9 nat. and 13 state banks, 5 daily, 20 wkly, 1 semi-wkly and 12 monthly papers. Five railroads centre at Louisville, and regular lines of steam packets run to New Orleans, the cities of lower Ohio, and Cincinnati. Located on the great highway between the North and South, the position of Louisville will always make her the great distributing point between the two sections. The commerce is immense. Louisville is one of the largest leaf-tobacco markets in the world, the sales of this one article amounting to over $5,000,000 annually. The trade in provisions aggregates from $11,000,000 to $15,000,000 annually; and the city is rapidly becoming one of the most important markets for live stock in the country. Pork-packing is extensively carried on, and the sugar-curing of hams is a special feature of the business. The annual product of iron foots up $5,000,000 Louisville is the great distributing market for the fine whiskeys made by the Kentucky distilleries. The manufacture of beer has also become a very important interest. Leather, cement, agricultural implements, furniture, and iron pipes for water and gas mains, are the other leading manufactures. Louisville is a port of delivery. In 1882 there were belonging to the port 60 steamers of 17,838 tons built during the year, 18 steamers of 8,430 tons, and 6 barges of 6,746 tons. The city is divided into 12 wards, and is governed by a mayor with a board of aldermen of one and a common council of two members for each ward. It is well supplied with water and gas, and has an excellent paid fire department. Louisville was established by act of the Virginia legislature in May, 1780, and named in honor of Louis XVI. of France; it was incorporated as a city in 1828. An important exposition of the products and manufactures of the United States was held here in 1883. Pop. in 1810, 1,357; in 1840, 21,210; in 1860, 68,033; in 1870, 100,753; in 1880, 123,645.

Lowell, Mass., a city & one of the caps. of Middlesex co., and the second in the State in the point of population, is beautifully situated on the Merrimack R., at the mouth of the Concord R., 25 m. N. W. Boston. The site of the city has many inequalities, but the streets are regularly laid out, and are well paved, seweraged, and lighted with gas. The principal public buildings are the court-house, the city hall, the school houses, of which 15 are of brick, and the churches; and there are many elegant residences. The village of Belvidere in the E. part is the handsomest portion of the city. Seven railroads centre in the place. Lowell is the leading seat of the cotton manufacture in the U. States. There are twelve incorporated manufacturing companies, mostly engaged in the manuf. of cotton goods; 11 private companies are engaged in the manuf. of textile fabrics of various kinds. The capital stock employed by the 12 incorporated companies is $16,000,000; number of mills, 80; spindles, 678,521; looms, 15,189; females employed, 10,000; males, 6,000; yards cotton cloth made per week, 2,660,000; woolen cloth, 60,000; yards of carpeting, 37,000; shawls, 2,500; dozens hosiery made per week, 16,800. The most important iron-works are the Lowell Machine shop, employing 1,250 hands; American Bolt Co.; Swaine Turbine Co.; R. Kitson's Cotton Machinery Manufactory. The city has 7 nat. banks, with an aggregate capital of $2,500,000, a clearing house, and 6 savings banks; 4 daily and 7 wkly papers; 2 hospitals; 26 churches; a complete system of public water-works—deriving the supply from the Merrimack R.; 2 public libraries, an orphan asylum (Catholic), an old ladies' home, a young women's home, and other charitable institutions. Lowell was named after Francis C. Lowell of Boston; it was incorporated as a city in 1836. Pop. in 1870, 40,928; in 1880, 59,485.

Lynn, Mass., city ✚ and sea-port, Essex co., bordering S. on Lynn Harbor, an arm of Massachusetts Bay, and S. E. on Nahant Bay, separated from its harbor by the peninsula of Nahant, 10 m. N. E. Boston by E. RR. Its limits include a large plain in the S. and W. raised but a few ft. from the water level; a range of hills in the rear; a number of ponds known as the lakes of Lynn, beyond these; and in the N. E. an elevated plain, the most pleasant and healthy portion of the city. Lynn is celebrated for its manuf. of shoes, in which it surpasses every other place in the U. States. There are nearly 200 establishments engaged in the business, employing abt. 10,000 hands. The larger part of the goods consist of low-priced shoes for women, misses, and children, though nearly every variety of sewed boots and shoes is made here. The manuf. of morocco, embracing kid and sheep skins as well as goat skins, is of considerable importance. From 15 to 20 manufacturers are engaged in the business, employing 400 workmen and abt. $1,000,000 capital. The largest factory is capable of tanning and finishing 5,000 skins a week. There are also some minor manuf. embracing machine needles, shoe machinery, boxes, carriages, cement, &c., 3 nat. banks, 2 fire insurance companies, 2 savings banks, 2 daily and 6 wkly papers, a public library of 20,000 volumes, and 30 churches. The city has a fire department and a police force, and is supplied with water from Reel's pond in the N.W. part of the city, by works erected at a cost of $800,000. Pop. in 1870, 28,233; in 1880, 38,284.

Maine, the most easterly State of the Union, is situated between lat. 43° 6' and 47° 28' N., and lon. 62° 47' and 69° 57' W. It is bounded N.W. by Canada East, N.E. by New Brunswick, S.E. and S. by the Atlantic Ocean, and W. by New Hampshire. The extreme length is 302 m., and the extreme width 224 m.; area, 29,895. The surface of Me. is varied, the central and N.W. portions rising into lofty summits (a continuation of the White Mts. of N.H.), the highest of which, Mt. Katabdin, is 5,385 ft. above sea level. Among these mountains and hills are wide spread valleys and plains, watered by pure springs and never-failing rivers. Its shore line from Kittery to Quoddy Head is 226 m. in extent, while following the indentations of the coast along the deep inlets and river estuaries as far inland as the ebb and flow of the tide it is fully 3,000 m. The hydrographic survey of the State, made in 1867, gives a total of 1,955 water powers, or "mill privileges," containing at least 3,000,000 net horse powers. The average elevation of the surface of the State above tide-water is estimated at abt. 1,000 feet. No other State has so many natural reservoirs and water-courses. There are 1,620 lakes and 5,151 streams represented on the State map of Me. The water surface covers an area of 3,200 sq. m. and the lakes alone 2,300 sq. m., or abt. 1-15 part of the State. The principal bays are Passamaquoddy, Machias, and Little Machias, Englishman's, Narraguagus, Frenchman's, Isle au Haute, Penobscot and Belfast bays, Muscongus, Damariscotta, Sheepscott, Quohog, Casco, Saco, and Piscataqua Bay or estuary. The Saco R. drains a dozen or more small lakes, and itself falls into Saco Bay. The Umbagog chain of lakes is drained by the Androscoggin, which by a circuitous course finds its way into Quohog Bay. The Moosehead chain, which comprises, besides Moosehead Lake, many small lakes, finds an outlet in the Kennebec R., which discharges its waters into the ocean by many channels through a wide delta. The Penobscot R. drains nearly one-third of the area of the State, and through its E. and W. branches and their tributaries furnishes an outlet for the surplus waters of more than fifty lakes and ponds, and debouch a full volume of water into Penobscot Bay. Union, Pleasant, Narraguagus, Schoodic, St. Croix, and other rivers which discharge their waters into the Atlantic, form the outlets of a number of these lakes. Jones R., which drains the N. part of the State, has abt. 100 lakes and ponds attached to it and its tributaries.—Me. has been known from its earliest settlement to be rich in minerals, but it is only within a short period that any effort has been made to profit by such knowledge. In the several mining belts on the coast already explored, covering a distance of more than 200 m., silver, gold and copper are found in paying quantities. There are more than 300 located mines in the State, nearly 50 of which are in full operation, with a total capitalization of over $14,000,000. The work of exploring and developing the mineral resources of Me. is as yet hardly begun. The interior lies untouched, while much still remains to be accomplished on the coast belts. Tin, zinc and lead ores are found, also feldspar, manganese, tripoli, iron pyrites, hornstone, fine emery, sand-glass, mica, &c. Tourmaline, emeralds, garnets, and other precious stones are also found.—The climate is one of extremes. In the year the temperature ranges between 20° or 30° below to 100° above zero. The annual mean temperature at Portland (lat. 43 40' N., lon. 70° 14' W.) is abt. 43.5°, rainfall 42.25 inches. In the extreme N. part of the State the temperature ranges from 5° to 10° lower. The winters are severe, but the temperature is not subject to violent changes. The snow lies on the ground for from 3 to 5 months.—The soil in the river valleys and between the Penobscot and Kennebec is of good quality and yields large crops. In the mountainous districts and along the sea coast it is sterile, and does not repay cultivation. In other parts of the State it is moderately productive. A large portion of the State is still covered with forests, and its timber and lumber trade directly and indirectly gives employment to a large number of its inhabitants. The forests of the N. part of the State are principally composed of pine, hemlock, and spruce. Farther S. there is an admixture of white and red oak, maple, beech, birch and ash. There are cedar swamps in the N. portion. Poplar, elm, basswood, dogwood, sassafras, juniper, pine, hornbeam, buttonwood, wild plum, alder, willow, etc., are found in the forests of the S. part of the State. Among the fruit trees, the cherry, plum, pear, and apple flourish, but the peach does not succeed well. The principal product for the year 1880 were as follows:

There were on farms 87,847 horses, 298 mules, 43,049 working oxen, 150,845 milch cows, 140,527 other cattle, 565,918 sheep, and 74,369 swine.—Me. had, in 1880, 4,481 manuf. establishments, employing 22,954 hands; capital invested, $49,988,171; wages paid during the year, $13,623,318; value of materials, $51,120,708; value of products, $79,829,795. The leading industries are the production of lumber and lime, the cotton and woolen manuf. the packing of ice, fish and vegetables, ship building and stone quarrying. The immense amount of water power renders the use of steam necessary in only a small number of mills. There are abt. 1,200 saw mills, employing abt. 9,000 hands, and the yearly value of sawed lumber is abt. $12,000,000. Bangor is the great lumber mart, where the amount surveyed during the season reaches abt. 200,000,000 ft. There were, in 1880, 24 cotton-mills, working 15,971 looms and 695,924 spindles; capital invested $15,292,078; hands employed 11,864; cotton consumed, 112,381 bales; value of materials, $7,320,152; value of products, $13,319,363. Ship building, once Me.'s pride and boast, although not so extensive as formerly is not a forgotten art. In 1882, 120 vessels of 61,206 tons and 14 steamers of 1,909 tons were built. The principal ship yards are at Bath, Waldoborough and Belfast. Me. ranks second only to Mass. in the extent and value of her sea fisheries. The fishery statistics for the census year 1880 were as follows: persons employed, 11,071; vessels employed 606 of 17,632 tons; fishing boats, 5,920; pounds of sea products as they come from the water, 202,048,440, reduced to 116,122,048 after being prepared for the market; value of products in marketable condition $3,614,178. The storing and exportation of ice is fast becoming a vast business. In 1880, 1,000,000 tons were stored on the Kennebec R. and vicinity (against 250,000 in 1870). Granite and slate, capable of the highest finish, are quarried in immense quantities, and go to adorn and beautify many of the most massive and costly structures in the country. Lime, burned from Me.'s superior quality of limestone, is also a large product.—The numerous harbors along the extensive sea-coast, give to the State great facilities for commerce. There are 14 U. States customs districts, viz.: Aroostook (port of entry, Houlton), Passamaquoddy (port of entry, Eastport), Machias, Frenchman's Bay (port of entry, Ellsworth), Castine, Bangor, Belfast, Waldoborough, Wiscasset, Bath, Portland and Falmouth, Saco, Kennebank and York. The imports from foreign countries for the year 1882, were $3,182,926; exports, $2,924,265. There were 2,494 sailing vessels of 507,818 tons and 93 steamers of 16,656 tons belonging to the different districts. Portland is the principal port, and one of the best on the Atlantic coast. Me. had in 1882, 1,022 m. of railroad in operation.—Me. system of free schools, while it is not without faults, is such that the children of the humblest stand side by side with those of the highest in the matter of school privileges. Together they may enter the door of the primary and, passing through all the grades, emerge from the free high school amply prepared to enter upon the active duties of citizenship, or fitted to enter the college or university. With a population of 635,000 there are 250,000 scholars, scattered through the 500 towns and plantations in the State. To accommodate this growing army of learners there are more than 5,000 school houses, in which as many teachers give instruction on an average of 21 weeks in the year. Added to these are the private seminaries and training schools, of which very many of the larger towns have one or more. There are also three State normal schools devoted to the work of training teachers for their professional labors, to which tuition is free. The principal institutions for higher education are Bowdoin college at Brunswick, Bates college at Lewiston, Colby university at Waterville, and the State college of agriculture at Orono, near Bangor, one of the latest and best of Me.'s higher training schools. The institutions supported wholly or in part by the State are the insane hospital at Augusta, the reform school near Portland, the State prison at Thomaston, and the soldiers' orphans' home.—The State is divided into 16 cos., viz.: Androscoggin, Aroostook, Cumberland, Franklin, Hancock, Kennebec, Knox, Lincoln, Oxford, Penobscot, Piscataquis, Sagadahoc, Somerset, Waldo, Washington, York. The incorporated cities are: Augusta (the cap.), Auburn, Bangor, Bath, Belfast, Biddeford, Calais, Ellsworth, Gardiner, Hallowell, Lewiston, Portland (the chief sea-port and leading commercial city), Rockland and Saco.—Me. is governed under the constitution of 1820. The legislative authority is vested in a senate of 31 members and a house of representatives of 151 members, all elected annually by the people. The general election is held on the second Monday in Sept., and the legislature meets in Augusta on the first Wednesday in Jan. annually. The governor (salary $2,500) is also elected annually, and is assisted in his executive duties by a council of 7 members, elected on joint ballot by the legislature. The supreme court consists of 8 judges appointed by the governor and council for 7 years and having a salary of $3,000 each. The State sends 4 representatives to congress and has 6 electoral votes. The prohibitory liquor laws have made Me. famous in the temperance reform. The only lawful sale of liquor (including all malt liquors), is under the direction of a commissioner who is required to furnish municipal officers of towns in Maine, with pure unadulterated intoxicating liquors, to be sold for medicinal, mechanical and manuf. purposes. The penalty for violation by a common seller is $100 fine or three months' imprisonment for the first, and $250 fine and four months' imprisonment for the second and each subsequent offence. The total State debt in 1881 was $5,801,900; sinking fund, $1,436,367. The val. of taxable prop. was $235,978,716; rate of tax, 4½ mills.—Me. separated from Mass. in 1880 and was admitted into the Union as a State. The disputed boundary line between the U. States and British territory was settled by treaty in 1842. Pop. in 1790, 96,540; in 1820, 298,269; in 1860, 628,279; in 1870, 626,915; in 1880, 648,936 (of whom 324,058 males and 324,878 females, 590,053 natives and 58,883 of foreign birth, 646,852 whites, 1,451 colored, 8 Chinese and 625 Indians).
